About Duchenne Muscular Dystrophy (DMD)

DMD is a progressive muscle disorder that causes loss of muscle function and independence.

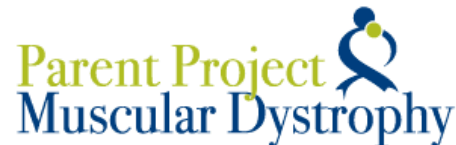

To date, there is "No Cure".

DMD affects 1 in 3,500 boys worldwide each year.

Because the DMD gene is found on the "X" chromosome, the disorder manifests primarily in boys.

It affects all races and cultures.

Approximately 35% of all cases are the result of random spontaneous genetic mutation that can occur during pregnancy regardless of family history.
