

Volume 17 • Number 4 • Winter 2010

Coaching as Organisational Development

Journal of the
Association for Management Education and Development

amed

developing people
developing organisations

Coaching as Organisational Development

© AMED 2010. ISSN 2042 – 9797. Copyright of this e-Organisations and People journal remains jointly with The Association for Management Education and Development and with the author(s). However, you may freely print or download articles to a local hard disk, provided they are for your personal and non-commercial use only. Please ensure that you acknowledge the original source in full using the following words 'This article first appeared in e-Organisations and People Vol 17 No 4, Winter 2010 and is reproduced by kind permission of AMED www.amed.org.uk'.

For permission to reproduce article(s) from this journal more widely, please contact the AMED Office www.amed.org.uk, Tel: +44 (0) 1480-459-575.

The views expressed in this journal by both editorial staff and contributors are not those of AMED or any of the organisations represented by the editors, but reflect the opinions of the individual authors only.

Coaching as Organisational Development	1
Editorial
Paul Z Jackson and Chris Grieve
An overview of the diverse stories and issues contained in this volume, identifying applications of positive psychology, complexity science, systemic and solutions-focused approaches, and inviting further research into the serious issues and benefits arising from and associated with coaching.
If the answer was coaching what was the question?	5
Karen Maxwell
How the company-wide introduction of Action Learning Sets led to a coaching style of leading, enhancing market responsiveness in a global automobile business.
Systemic Modelling:	13
Installing Coaching as a Catalyst for Organisational Learning
Nancy Doyle, Paul Tosey and Caitlin Walker
Uses stories, metaphors and examples to illustrate an organizational coaching process called Systemic Modelling, including a case study demonstrating a shift from a defensive to a collaborative culture.
A High-performing Factory via Solution-focused Coaching: a Case Study	23
Paolo Terni
Describes organizational transformation within a small alpine bottling plant through team coaching, which gave participants the freedom to discover what kind of leaders they wanted to be.
Solution Focused Organisation Development:	31
A Swiss case-study
Dominik Godat
Argues that a solution-focused approach made a significant contribution to the organisational development of a Swiss company, helping it to come through a merger unstuck, appreciative and dynamic.

Creating a coaching culture one conversation at a time:	38
Solutions-focused coaching at John Laing Integrated Services
Janine Waldman
A case study of how a positive (SF) approach helped a rapidly growing support services business to achieve raised management performance and integrated 'learning to learn' into their coaching programme.
Common sense-making:	49
The value of coaching and teambuilding to support sustained organisational change
Vicky Cosstick
Stories from several UK charities about the neglected personal, relational and shadow sides of organizational change, illustrating the value of 1:1 coaching and team-building with managers.
Can line managers ever be effective coaches	57
Jeff Matthews
Contrasts developmental or 'executive' and 'performance' coaching contracts, as well as the respective coaching roles and effectiveness of internal managers and external coaches
Coachee Preparation	68
Getting the best possible start to the coaching experience
Caroline Taylor
Argues that the initial preparation of people for coaching is crucial but frequently overlooked, and suggests how to remedy this oversight.
A Coaching Style of Leadership	74
Improving Customer Service at Southern Railway with Buonacorsi Consultin
Gill How and Zoey Hudson
A case study of a six-year award-winning intervention supporting a coaching style of leadership.
On the reconciliation of hedgehogs with foxes	83
David McAra
A review of Beyond Crisis: Achieving Renewal in a Turbulent World
e-O&P needs you – and you need e-O&P!	85