The Benchmark of Best Cleaning Practices

This product specifications book is the direct result of 25 years of research by ManageMen, Inc. It is based on trial and error testing utilizing millions of man-hours with thousands of janitorial workers in hundreds of facilities for more than a generation. The ManageMen Operating System 1 or (OS1)® process began development in the early 1990s. From the beginning it was based on assigning workers based on two driving force principles:

- Eliminate doing anything that causes the facility to be more polluted because of the task.
- Use the one best way for performing all work.

ManageMen’s efforts to quantify best practices were joined by an outstanding group of facility managers. This group was formed initially by users of (OS1) to meet and network. Quickly the networking idea grew into a formal symposium expressly dedicated to janitorial operations.

The (OS1) Users Symposium was organized 2002 to assist in benchmarking best practices. This was a requirement for The Boeing Company to qualify for the Malcolm Baldrige Quality Award. The Boeing Company subsequently earned the Baldrige Award in 2003. Following an extensive survey of custodial operations at organizations considered “best of class” including General Electric, The Tennessee Valley Authority and ConocoPhillips. The Boeing Company decided to benchmark best practices in cleaning against organizations using (OS1).

The Boeing Company selected the original benchmarking group and invited them to Seattle to meet and share data with Boeing’s Shared Services Group (SSG) which performed the cleaning operations. The group named this event the (OS1) Users Symposium. A special tour was part of the symposium at Boeing facilities in Everett, Washington. The symposium group was treated to a firsthand inspection of the ongoing implementation of the (OS1) cleaning process in the largest building in the world (according to the Guinness Book of World Records) the 98 acre Boeing Everett manufacturing plant.

The original group of symposium participants included The University of Massachusetts at Amherst, Sandia National Labs div. Lockheed Martin, The University of New Mexico, The University of Texas at Austin, The Delta Center, Sodexho Marriott, Professional Janitorial Services, GMI, Goodwill Industries, Jordan School District, the State of Washington, Yale University, ManageMen, and The Boeing Company. These organizations provided presentations of best practices and data they were willing to share with the group. Since that time the (OS1) Users Symposium has become the premiere event dedicated to cleaning industry science for facility management organizations.

Following this first symposium the participants decided to continue meeting annually to share data and pursue best practices and a quest for the “One best way.” The following year the (OS1) Users Symposium was sponsored by the University of Texas at Austin under the direction of Ernest Hunter, director of physical plant. In 2004 the University of Massachusetts at Amherst sponsored the event under the direction of Ashoke Ganguli, Director of Auxiliary Services. After the 2005 Symposium in San Diego, hosted by GMI under the direction of Paul Condie and Larry Abrams, it was decided that the event was too large to be sponsored by any one organization.

The (OS1) Users Symposium group formed a non profit organization to advance their objectives. In 2008 the group adopted the name the Simon Institute. The institute is an independent group of facility cleaning organizations devoted to advancing the professionalism of the cleaning industry.

In 2009 Dr. Jeff Campbell, Chair of the Brigham Young University, Facility Management Department, began forming an advisory Think Tank to support the Simon Institute. The Think Tank’s mission is to advance the applied science of cleaning for health. Dr. Campbell is serving as the director of research to the Simon Institute.

This book contains the product specifications currently in use in the (OS1) process. Since it’s first installation in the Delta Center in 1992 ManageMen has been testing and adding new products and removing products that did not perform as well. Virtually every product in this specification book is radically different than those selected originally for the process. This active process of innovation is called establishing a Best Practices Benchmark in the (OS1) world.

These products are formally reviewed and approved by the Simon Institute and the Cleaning Industry Trainers Guild. On February 6, 2009 the Simon Institute Board of Directors unanimously approved the products specified herein as the Benchmarked Best products in the cleaning industry and approved this introduction to be placed in the front of this book.

We Wrote the Book(s) on Team Cleaning

No tree was cut down to produce this ManageMen® Publication.

(OS1) training materials are printed on 100% recycled post-consumer fiber Wausau Exact Eco paper and card stock that is Green Seal Certified (GS-7). The paper is acid-free and lignin-free. No bleach was used in the recycling process. It was printed using soy ink. If the books were shipped it was via UPS utilizing the EPA 2008 “SmartWay Excellence Award criteria” for transportation and recycling practices. The shipping cartons, labels and packaging wrappers are also 100% recycled post-consumer fiber stock.
