Hard News:

R: why the NSA was created: to cover up the presence of our brothers and sisters! Everything else is a side issue. What does Ed Snowden know about what has happened since 1947?

Real issue: full disclosure

KOS via text message: this is the only issue

- Mr XI and Mr 19.5* have been working to get the idea of 19.5 front and centre - as BO can talk about his experiences on Mars
- story of Syria: only about the stargate in Aleppo

T: Rep Sheila Jackson-Lee - on House Judiciary Committee; was talking about Ed Snowden as a hero

- Ed Schultz said no; he is part of no-bid contracts - said he violated his oath.
- Sheila asked What oath? He is a private contractor!
- ED Schultz: when you work for the agency, you have an oath to the agency
- SJ-L: he is a contractor and the oath is about protecting the people from inside and outside forces; when the agency is not representing the people, then you must speak up.
- Ed left the story there: cannot pursue the discussion - the agency boys control the 4th estate, the communication links!
- No one is talking about the fact that the Sarin gas was put there by Israeli agents, NOT AL ASSAUD

R: asked KOS via text about Hezbollah; his answer -

- IT IS NOT HEZBOLLAH; ISRAEL IS GUNNING FOR A FIGHT WITH IRAN.
- Israel is supposedly the bad boy on the block with the missiles; Netanyahu will have some explaining to do when the missiles do not work; he will have to face Mother who is not in a bargaining mood!
- Everything is looking more and more upbeat with the frequencies coming in

T: yes, also more and more scary! Watching McCain screaming in the Senate that providing arms is not enough & that a no-fly zone is needed.

- Thom Hartmann pointed out that Russia has given Syria ground-to-air missiles
Do we want to challenge Russia & Russia's equipment???

R: Ashtar has said: ZERO NUKES! And we have reached Global Zero - no nukes! When we can truly say there are no more nukes, we can have a good discussion

T: Back in 1961 and Cuban missile crisis: US used Cuba as a front, went there and launched a nuke from Cuba - JFK was compromised here

R: did not actually talk to Ed Schultz, but an intermediary who called China out and said China is still a communist country and still "The enemy"

T: yet the people of China are not following the old guard

R: the leaders are not leaders but followers of the old order of the Black Dragon who are getting very old

- a paradox to call China a communist country when they are more capitalistic than we think of communism being

T: and we are not a democratic country either, nor a republic, as those on both sides of the fence are New World Order

R: the Supreme Court judges are the kings behind the scenes: the crowners of kings/presidents

T: story goes back to Marberry vs. Madison - they were not supposed to claim that they could determine what is law and what is not -

- the Supreme Court put Citizens United in place WITHOUT THE APPROVAL OF CONGRESS - very ugly!
- we have to wait certain things out

R: yes, we do - Sandy Hook people's movement is growing, not going away!

T: the NWO thing is scary!

2013, June 13 Supreme Court: We own our genes

BY Geoffrey Cowley @geoffreycowley

The Supreme Court ruled unanimously June 13, 2013, that human genes cannot be patented. It did agree that synthetic genetic material is OK to patent, handing down a mixed ruling for the biotechnology industry. (Photo by Gallery Stock)

In a decision that could undo thousands of questionable patents, freeing scientists and citizens from corporate overreach, the Supreme Court has ruled unanimously that human genes—as products of nature—cannot be claimed as private property.

The Thursday morning decision—in Association for Molecular Pathology, et al. v. United States Patent and Trademark Office, et al.—focused on Myriad Genetics, a Utah-based biotech company that claimed the rights to two naturally occurring genes that foster breast and ovarian cancer when they carry certain mutations. Scientists at Myriad identified the two genes, known as BRCA1 and BRCA2, during the early 1990s and went on to develop and market tests that women can use to determine their own risk.

Myriad and other biotech companies saw gene patenting as a legitimate exercise of intellectual property rights. But the court’s ruling codifies a common-sense answer that Dr. Jonas Salk offered in a 1955 television interview, when Edward R. Murrow asked him who owned the patent on the polio vaccine.

The people own it

Salk had recently developed the breakthrough inoculation with his colleagues at the University of Pittsburgh. Millions of school kids were lining up to receive it, and the greatest scourge of the postwar era was receding. Salk understood that the virus itself was a product of nature. He and his colleagues had simply discovered that the right injection of killed virus could immunize people against the live one.

“Well, the people [own the vaccine],” Salk told Murrow. “There is no patent. Could you patent the sun?”

No one has disputed Myriad’s exclusive right to the cancer tests it developed. But by staking a claim to the BRCA genes themselves, the company impounded a piece of biology, the court ruled. For nearly two decades, its patents have blocked the use of better, cheaper technologies, forcing patients and insurers to pay $3,000 to $4,000 for tests that would cost less than \$100 in an open market.

The high court has now declared it an unlawful effort to patent the sun. “Nobody ‘invents’ genes, so no one should be able to claim ownership of them,” the Public Patent Foundation said in a statement on the decision. “We are not talking about a new drug or a new tool to fight cancer. We are talking about a genetic marker that occurs naturally in the human body. That cannot, and should not, be patented.”

Related: Watch: Supreme Court rules against patenting human genes

Under the Patent Act of 1952, “human-made inventions” can become private property but “products of nature” cannot. The distinction was still clear in the 1980s when bioengineers started synthesizing artificial DNA molecules for diagnostic and therapeutic use. These “probes” and “primers” were laboratory inventions, and the Patent Office treated them accordingly. But as genetic science expanded during the ’90s, the Patent Office went further, allowing thousands of companies to patent useful segments of naturally occurring DNA (i.e., genes) that scientists had extracted from human chromosomes. The Patent Office reasoned that these naturally occurring genes qualified as “human-made inventions” because scientists had isolated them from their natural surroundings.

Under that controversial policy, Myriad secured patents on the BRCA genes that reside in every human cell. The company also claimed ownership of all possible mutations in those genes, and all possible methods for finding those mutations. For good measure, it also patented the correlations between BRCA mutations and the risk of breast or ovarian cancer. As the ACLU noted in a backgrounder on the case, “anyone who makes or uses a patented gene without permission of the patent holder—whether it be for commercial or noncommercial purposes—is committing patent infringement.”

After securing those rights, Myriad enforced them aggressively, alienating scientists and health advocates at every turn. A coalition representing both groups pushed back in 2009, challenging the patents’ legality, and a federal district court ruled in their favor. The district court found that as “products of nature,” the BRCA genes couldn’t legitimately become private property. But a three-judge appeals panel overturned the ruling, voting two-to-one that Myriad has made the genes more useful by isolating them from the surrounding DNA in human chromosomes.

Now that the Supreme Court has rejected that finding, the case will return to the appeals court, which will determine the next steps in the case.

Other existing patents could come under question

Biotech industry analysts had predicted that the court would side with Myriad. They pointed to a recent decision in which the justices sided unanimously with Monsanto in its dispute with a farmer who failed to pay royalties on soybeans derived from its own genetically modified variety. But the analogy was imperfect. Unlike the BRCA genes, Monsanto’s patented soybeans differ from anything found in nature. The company reconfigured the natural bean genes to create a plant that would stand up to pesticides. In short, the patent covered an invention, not a “product of nature.”

A 2012 case involving the Mayo Clinic and Prometheus Laboratories offered a better window into the court’s thinking. In that case, Prometheus sued Mayo for developing a test that doctors could use to predict different patients’ reactions to the same class of drugs. Prometheus, which had already patented such a test, claimed (like Myriad) that it owned not only the tool it invented but also the physiological relationships the tool measured. The court rejected that claim, ruling that “the relationships . . . are not themselves patentable” and that a patent on an invention can’t legitimately “monopolize” the natural correlations the invention illuminates.

A woman holds a banner demanding a ban over human genes patents during a protest outside the US Supreme Court in Washington on April 15, 2013. The Supreme Court is poised to take up the highly charged question of whether human genes can be patented. (Photo by Mladen Antonov/Getty)

That insight may have been lost on the Patent Office and the biotech industry, but the rest of the world seems to get it. The plaintiffs in the original complaint against Myriad include organizations representing 150,000 scientists, medical groups, women’s groups and anti-cancer activists. After it reached the Supreme Court, the case drew amicus briefs from the U.S. Solicitor General, a host of medical societies and even Nobel laureate James Watson, who co-discovered the structure of DNA in 1953.

“A human genome cluttered with no trespassing signs...inhibits scientific progress,” Watson wrote in his brief. “The resources devoted to cancer research, neurological diseases, and other areas will be diverted to concerns about whether one can use a particular human gene. For a new assay using hundreds of human genes, the sea of patents and patent applications would create hundreds, if not thousands, of individual obstacles to developing and commercializing the assay. The best way . . . to resolve this problem is to eliminate the unnecessary patenting of human genes.”

Thursday’s decision effectively does just that. It may invalidate some 4,000 existing gene patents. And it will broaden the quest for medical knowledge.

2013, April FBI Confirm Aliens Exist - Released Declassified UFO Documents & Files - Who Is The Real Threat To Earth?

<http://sparkster.hubpages.com/hub/FBI-Confirm-Aliens-Exist>

The Guy Hottel Memo

Although Dr Bruce Maccabee proposes that the 1950 memo written by Guy Hottel (see below) is related to the Silas Newton hoax, Sergeant First Class Clifford Stone claims that Newton knew the truth about the alleged UFO crashes and extraterrestrial visitors and had attempted to use the phenomena in order to claim that he had discovered a new form of energy. He attempted to raise funds, claiming that he needed the money to finance the operation.

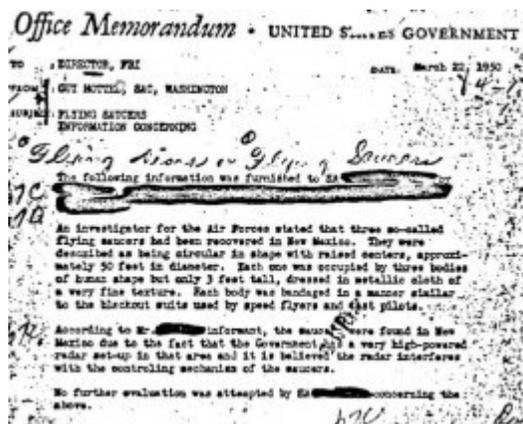

Silas Newton was convicted of fraud.

Even though the 1950 memo relates to the Silas Newton deception, it does not prove that the UFO/EBE presence is either true or false, only that Newton had tried to use the information for deceitful and fraudulent purposes. Sergeant First Class Clifford Stone, who took part in the Disclosure Project, claims that Silas Newton knew the truth.

The memo was presented to Dr Steven Greer's Disclosure project as documented evidence and remains under the 'unexplained phenomena' category at the FBI Vault website.

Why is it that the FBI have officially labelled the allegedly leaked Majestic-12 (MJ-12) documents as "bogus" but have archived the Guy Hottel memo of 1950 under the category of Unexplained Phenomenon?

The Guy Hottel FBI Memo 1950

1950 Guy Hottel FBI Memo

Source: http://vault.fbi.gov/hottel_guy/Guy%20Hottel%20Par...

EDIT (April 2013): The FBI have recently published a blog post confirming that they never investigated the claims made in the now-famous Hottel memo. The FBI also made it clear that the memo is not related to the Roswell incident of 1947 in any way, the document relates to a completely separate incident which remains unexplained to this day.

Additionally, recent attention has been drawn to the FBI document which confirms that a UFO exploded above Utah (see video below). Dr. Bruce Maccabee has studied the FBI files extensively and concludes that there is an extraterrestrial presence engaging the human race, ... and just in time for Sirius and CHOD \(Citizen's Hearing On Disclosure\).

There's been a whole lot of buzz going on in the UFO and alien community over the past few years with UFO sightings and public interest increasing tenfold over the past ten years. First the UK's Ministry of Defense (MoD) decided to carry out a phased release of their official UFO documents leading up to 2012, NSA then made their files public and accessible online and now the FBI have started releasing their documents too.

FBI Documents - UFO's & Aliens

Although there's some interesting information there, controversy has arisen particularly in relation to a document written by FBI special agent Guy Hottel in 1950 who claimed to have received information from a US Air Force investigator about a UFO found in New Mexico. The document claims that three bodies about three feet tall, dressed in a very fine metallic cloth and bandaged up in a way similar to the method that test pilots use were recovered from the crash.

Whilst many people are claiming that this document proves the existence of extraterrestrial life and it IS an official FBI document it has been suggested (decades ago) by Bruce Maccabee that the document could also relate to a hoax originally perpetrated by Silas Newton. Officially there is no explanation for the document and the FBI have placed it under the perhaps appropriate subcategory Unexplained Phenomenon (See edit at beginning of article).

However, the document was actually presented as evidence to Dr Steven Greer for the purpose of the Disclosure Project, a non-profit organization that has collected over 120 hours of witness testimony from government and military officials, astronauts, pilots, etc who have all confirmed their will to testify under oath before congress that what they are saying about the UFO phenomena is the truth.

One document contained within the FBI files provides a detailed illustration of a flying disc which is, rather coincidentally, identical to the several discs that can be seen on the Youtube video of NASA's infamous tether overload incident. The disc even had the triangular notch in it - after NASA told us that the anomalies on the video footage were most likely ice or dust particles. When this excuse didn't fly too well they claimed they were camera anomalies - NASA gave two different conflicting explanations.

FBI Documents - Cattle Mutilation

The FBI also released documents in relation to cattle mutilations which have been strongly attributed to alleged UFO and alien activity whereby organs and blood had been removed with surgical precision. Several theories have been put forward to explain the cattle mutilation phenomenon such as other animals feeding on the carcass while it's fresh, biological warfare experiments and even satanic occultism which was rife throughout the prison system. However, there remains absolutely no evidence to this day, even though cattle mutilations still take place. What we do know is that many of the animals seem to have been dropped from a great height and black helicopters are often seen. Some kind of belt, harness or strap was also found at one of the cattle mutilation sites which may have been used to either lift up or release the cow(s). It's not only animals that are being mutilated though, there are actually also many human mutilations taking place too.

NSA Documents - Extra Terrestrial Intelligence

Contained within the NSA's archive is a document which appears to relate to 29 encoded messages received by extraterrestrial intelligence. Whilst this document stormed the internet amongst believers who claimed it also proved the existence of intelligent alien life, several skeptics came to the conclusion that the document is, in fact, just a staff training exercise. However, government whistleblowers have come forward to say that signals, such as the 'wow signal' have been received and documented numerous times by Harvard University but have been ignored because there were no further anomalies when those regions were scanned again. Harvard University confirmed with researchers that the claims were genuine.

MoD Documents - Unexplained

Whilst the Ministry of Defense's documents hold witness testimony but seemingly very little else information on the subject, former MoD employee Nick Pope believes that between 5-10% of sightings cannot be explained in conventional terms and that more investigations are required in the interest of national security.

Pope also claims to have had a close-up photograph of a UFO on the wall of his office when he worked for MoD. In a UFO documentary entitled The Day Before Disclosure Nick Pope attempted to debunk several incidents before going on to state that an extraterrestrial presence is undoubtedly and unequivocally engaging the human race.

In addition, the MoD confirmed that they found evidence of the existence of MJ-12 \(Majestic-12\) under a secret stamp but could attain no further information on the subject. The MJ-12 documents were also confirmed by Stanton Friedman's interview with Charlette Mann, who confirmed that her grandfather was involved in a UFO crash retrieval involving alien bodies as early as 1941. Mann claimed her grandfather had told her that he had seen unusual small bodies that either had as skin, or were covered in, some kind of material that looked like aluminium tin-foil. Is it just a coincidence that the Guy Hottel memo also describes the same details?

Despite this new information the Majestic-12 documents remain labelled a 'hoax' by the FBI yet the Guy Hottel memo has not been labelled a hoax. It has been confirmed by other government whistleblowers, such as Command Sergeant Major Robert O' Dean, that Majestic-12 is now called PI40 and that there are now 36, or possibly more, members.

Note: information regarding this evidence seems to be rapidly disappearing from the internet.

The Disclosure Movement

Neil Armstrong, the first man on the moon, stated that certain freedoms could be accessed if a protective layer of secrecy could be stripped away. He also stated that him and Buzz Aldrin were being watched by someone much more technologically advanced than us all the time that they were on the moon and that there was no question of a space station before later denying ever saying it.

In addition, Edgar Mitchell (the 6th man on the moon) says he knows we have been visited and that extraterrestrial life exists. There are over four-hundred government and military officials that took part in Steven Greer's Disclosure Project plus several more who are not taking part but are taking part in the disclosure movement.

Edgar Mitchell has confirmed that he met with high-up government officials at the Pentagon who confirmed that the extraterrestrial presence is real, an alien spacecraft really did crash at Roswell in 1947 and the government has been covering up the evidence for decades. When questioned as to who was keeping the information secret the government officials stated that they did not know but it was obviously a transnational covert group who operate amongst the highest echelons of government.

Command Sergeant Major Robert O' Dean confirmed that this meeting had taken place in a basement room of the Pentagon nicknamed 'the tank'. According to Colonel Philip J Corso's books, The Day After Roswell and Dawn Of A New Age, and according to Corso's testimony, it was in the basement of the Pentagon that Corso gained access to the Roswell file.

Robert O' Dean had Cosmic Top Secret Clearance (38 levels above top secret) and claims that, whilst working for NATO, he saw a classified document entitled The Assessment which explained the UFO/EBE presence in great detail and theorized that the extraterrestrials have been around for hundreds, if not thousands, of years and that man's evolution may have even been a result of intervention by the extraterrestrials who are apparently knowledgeable on the subjects of genetic engineering and cloning.

Remote Viewing

In addition to the above, the FBI have many more documents relating to the alleged UFO/EBE presence including one document containing insightful information that a remote viewer had channeled during the time of the remote viewing experiments. The information seems to corroborate that from other official government whistleblower testimony, including that of Lt. Colonel Philip J Corso.

Corso (and many others) claim that the extraterrestrials have developed technology that interfaces with coherent thought and that they wore head-bands which allowed them to become an integrated part of their spacecraft - in other words, they navigated their spacecraft simply by thought.

The information in the FBI document states:

"A very serious situation may develop at any time with regard to the 'flying saucers'. If one of those should be attacked, the plane will almost certainly be destroyed. In the public mind this might create near panic and international suspicion."

The memo also states:

- "1. Parts of the discs carry crews, others are under remote control.*
- 2. Their mission is peaceful. The visitors contemplate settling on this plane.*
- 3. These visitors are human-like but much larger in size."*

Eventually the document states:

- 4. They are not incarnate Earth people, but come from their own world.*
- 5. They do not come from any 'planets' as we use the word but from an etheric planet which interpenetrates with our own and is not perceptible to us.*
- 6. The bodies of the visitors, and the craft also, automatically materialize on entering the vibratory rate of our dense matter.*

"7. The disks possess a type of radiant energy, or a ray, which will easily disintegrate any attacking ship. They re-enter the etheric at will, and so simply disappear from our vision, without trace.

8. The region from which they come is NOT the 'astral plane' but corresponds to the Lokas or Talas. Students of esoteric matters will understand these terms.

9. They probably cannot be reached by radio, but probably can be by radar, if a signal system can be devised for that."

Could the fact that the aliens allegedly communicate by telepathy and use thought to control their craft be the real reason for the remote viewing experiments in order to find out where the visitors were from?

Despite the fact that the public were told there was no conclusive evidence to suggest that remote viewing was useful, Nick Pope claimed that he had seen surprisingly successful remote viewing experiments being carried out first-hand himself.

Weaponization Of Space

Whilst the Disclosure project offers very little actual smoking-gun evidence (even over 10 years later), we need to remember that there are plans for the weaponization of space which Dr. Greer and all other participants of the Disclosure project seem to oppose. There is over 120 hours of highly compelling testimony from massively prestigious, highly reputable and credible government witnesses, people who we have trusted (and who have earned our trust) to have their fingers on the nuclear trigger; people such as Dan Salter, NRO (National Reconnaissance Office) who claims to have direct knowledge of a worldwide organization called ACIO (Advanced Contact Intelligence Organization) that was set up specifically to communicate with extraterrestrial civilizations.

As noted as part of Disclosure project testimony, when Mikhail Gorbachev was asked on CNN whether they should stop using weapons in space Mikhail's wife stepped in and said "No, I don't think we should ban nuclear weapons in space because of alien spacecraft!".

Her statement is ambiguous and can be taken either way.

Did she mean that alien spacecraft are being used to propose an opposition to the weaponization of space? Or did she mean that we need to keep nuclear weapons as defense against alien spacecraft?

Many officials testified to the fact that UFO's had been shutting down equipment at secret nuclear installations and that they are concerned that we may take nuclear weapons into space, in which case, the aliens may need to retaliate.

It was also claimed that the aliens are concerned that we may be on the brink of destroying ourselves - Earth is a precious resource for the extraterrestrials who are interested in Earth's magnetic field which they can use to maneuver and stay aloft according to Wang Sichao of China's Purple Mountain Observatory who confirmed that the observatory had observed ET craft on numerous occasions.

So, are the aliens a threat to us or are we a threat to the aliens?

FBI Confirm Colonel Philip J Corso's UFO Claim

Prior to the publication of Colonel Philip J Corso's 1997 book, The Day After Roswell, Colonel Corso had compiled a selection of his notes, along with his original story, called Dawn Of A New Age (which turned out very differently subsequent to his collaboration with William Byrnes). Dawn Of A New Age contained notes, cautions and recommendations which Corso had provided to his superior, General Trudeau.

Amongst these notes, Colonel Corso details how a charred semi-conductor chip had supposedly (sic) been retrieved from a UFO explosion (according to documents supplied to him) and had found it's way into Army R&D (Research & Development) at the Pentagon in 1961/1962, where he was stationed, thirteen years after it was picked up.

Despite the ridicule that Colonel Corso received because of his claims and his story, and rather fascinatingly, recently declassified government documents available at the FBI Vault website prove that a UFO did indeed explode over Utah in 1949, at the exact same time Colonel Corso claims the incident occurred (see video above).

I'll get into this in more detail later (I'm on deadline for a magazine feature), but this story just landed. Given the LIBOR story, the Interest Rate Swap manipulation story, the Euro gas price manipulation story, the U.S. energy price manipulation story, and (by now) countless others of the "Everything is Rigged" variety, this screams out for immediate notice. Via Bloomberg:

Traders at some of the world's biggest banks manipulated benchmark foreign-exchange rates used to set the value of trillions of dollars of investments, according to five dealers with knowledge of the practice . . .

Employees have been front-running client orders and rigging WM/Reuters rates by pushing through trades before and during the 60-second windows when the benchmarks are set, said the current and former traders, who requested anonymity because the practice is controversial. Dealers colluded with counterparts to boost chances of moving the rates, said two of the people, who worked in the industry for a total of more than 20 years.

This time the rates allegedly being rigged are in the foreign-exchange or "FX" markets, meaning that if this story is true, it would almost certainly trump LIBOR for scale/horribleness.

As one friend of mine who works on Wall Street put it, "It's endless! This is the biggest market in the world." Bloomberg suggested the story is just the tip of the iceberg:

"The FX market is like the Wild West," said James McGeehan, who spent 12 years at banks before co-founding Framingham, Massachusetts-based FX Transparency LLC, which advises companies on foreign-exchange trading, in 2009. "It's buyer beware."

The \$4.7-trillion-a-day currency market, the biggest in the financial system, is one of the least regulated. The inherent conflict banks face between executing client orders and profiting from their own trades is exacerbated because most currency trading takes place away from exchanges.

Again, more on this later. But the key thing here is the, uh . . . well, the consistent leitmotif of all these stories. One after another, it's the same thing: Insiders rigging benchmark rates, shaving money from basically everyone on earth, systematically and over periods of many years. It's the ultimate taxation-without-representation story – crazy stuff.
