Guest:

T: asks everyone to make a contribution for both MR and them: good karma and dharma

- As the galactics have been saying, they are helping but we still have to do the workshop
- As Bernie Sanders said, we need a movement: it is becoming more and more obvious that we have to speak truth to power.

HARD NEWS

T: this was a dog and pony show today, and at another level – NO. Both sides are in it together! And the underlying “stuff” is shared by both sides.

R: the barn is so full of you-know-what, it will take lots of time to clean it out. It was 11 hours today. Elijah Cummings honoured her by saying she was a lady and didn't: thank you!

- At certain points, Hillary wanted to lose it but she didn't! Overall, another bread and circus show for the masses to distract us from what is really going on.

Rana Mu: to Larry, Curly & Rama:

- Hillary knows quite well what happened at Bengazi; she is in a tight situation between the ocean of creation and the Dark Rift – both the same things: Mother!
- she does not have the 800 tonnes of gold to split with the 13 families as collateral to pay hired minions to do more black ops against the people of the world. St Germain has it all.
- She is being thrown under the bus by the higher echelons of the 13 families, being forced to testify again and by the whole dog and pony show fiasco of the so-called Bengazi show;
- The Republicans have wasted $5+ Million it looks like the Republicans have egg on their face
 - in the alternative news, all the clinton crime stories are beginning to be brought up for deeper scrutiny which is the purpose of what is going on.
 - Al Jazeera said last night: they said the wrong thing in the sense that it was a suicide of Hillary's lover, Vince Foster – it was ordered up by her to be murder
 - the pardon of Mark Rich is connected to the murder of Vince Foster: Mark manipulated the hedge fund market, took the money and gave it to Vince Foster who gave it to Hillary for the Child Defence Fund – which is her slush fund to this day! Not using it for what we think!
- Christopher Story was murdered in London, gangland style by US black ops; a clone is now living in Canada.
 - This now exposes all the Faction 2ers connected to the Chris Story, Leo Wanta Mitterand Fund – a slush fund for the Nazi coalition of the 13 families and this entire story is still covered up, but is coming back and will come out entirely
- Everything is a spider web, and this story has to do with Karl Rove who was connected to David Addington and others who conspired against a covert, CIA undercover agent called Valerie Plame; NY Times Judith Miller and Washington Post Bob Woodward – both helped in the outing of Valerie Plame by putting the name of the corporation Brewster and Jennings that identified over 100 of the 300 covert status CIA agents working under her
 - Karl Rove is very nervous about Don Seigalman who has been put in solitary confinement and no one knows what is happening to him! With Karl Rove behind the scenes ordering things up makes it worse; and he is in Louisiana, the worst pen in the US.
 - Free-don.org is the website: can sign a petition to get him out; there is a gofundme/donseigalman for the film – the 12 minute pre screening will show how scared Karl Rove is as it will show what he has done, and it is coming out very soon.

T: Lately the personal e-mails were hacked of Brennan, Head of CIA – when Al Jazeera finished with the story, they said that Hillary should be head of the CIA – they were telling the truth without saying it

- Hillary has had her fingers on the CIA since Bush Sr; she has been in partnership with

Bush Sr and Bush Jr since then and has always been: when you hear things being laid on Obama, IT IS ALL HILLARY AND HER MINIONS IN THE CIA – that is why she is getting away with what she's getting away with.

- The Repubs are getting away with things because they are trying to get her out of the running.

T: thinks the people have figured out what is going on.

R: it looks like the worst of times, but it is the best of times to be in a physical form in this reality

The Rest of what Rana Mu said:

- St Germain has all the gold; she is being thrown under the bus – this whole dog and pony show – all the Clinton crime stories are coming out the market went up 300 points – more fakery : at any time now, the whole draconian empire is blasting wide open now
- Mr Putin is using off-planet advanced technology given him by the Andromedans
 - being used to shut the CIA out of Syria and to shut out Net, Shin Bet, Mossad and special black ops forces of the IDF operating in Syria
 - there are ISIL non-human, off planet super soldiers going on in Syria – the moderate Syrian rebel groups are all operations of our CIA and being removed by Putin
 - Putin knows the rules of engagement very well; Bashir Al Assad will be held accountable his own crimes against his own people at the appropriate time

T: the orchestration has begun and so have many more blessings coming our way!

From Chaos to Clarity: Getting Unstuck & Creating A Life You Love

By Alex Bratty

A soup-to-nuts guide for how to recognize why you're stuck, how to unstuck it, and how to create a life you want - a life that works for you!

Amazon #1 Bestseller!

Alex Bratty was a superstar in the public-opinion polling field. One of the youngest partners ever in a prestigious Washington research firm, her job was to listen to people and find out what they think and how they feel. She tuned into their emotional responses to get deeply in touch with their "whys" in life.

The irony is that during the 15 years she was rising to the very top of her field, she wasn't listening to her own inner voice to discover her true emotions, to pay attention to her deepest desires and to understand why she was so miserably stuck in her own life!

Through tremendous trial and error, she finally found her way. And now she's giving other people the shortcut--through her remarkable book From Chaos to Clarity: Getting Unstuck & Creating a Life You Love--the essential quick-start guide to getting your life back on track.

Who amongst us hasn't felt stuck at one time or another? Maybe you're stuck right now! We all know that feeling of not knowing what to do next, or how to break out of the same old patterns of behavior, or listening to all that negative chatter that tells us we're not enough. As Alex puts it, when this happens, we keep ourselves running in place, playing small and safe.

Help is on the way! Like having a personal coach encouraging you, urging you gently and specifically, From Chaos to Clarity, an Amazon.com #1 bestseller, gives you the tools to take back control of your life, to stop struggling and to focus on how to create a life you truly want, rather than one you think you should want.

Alex knows that empty feeling. She wasn't fulfilling her life's purpose and she felt trapped in a life that was like a hamster wheel she couldn't get off. In her quest to find the missing piece, she embarked on a personal development journey that helped her uncover the true essence of what she wanted: to help people and to be of service in a way that would contribute positively to the world. In the book, Alex shares her own struggle with being stuck and how she moved from a life that felt unfulfilled, constricted, and frustrated to one that is expansive and filled with love, abundance, and joy.

From Chaos to Clarity provides a step-by-step guide for clearing the gunk from your path and getting you moving with alacrity to the REAL life awaiting. Alex offers examples, charts to fill out and questions to ponder that lead you to the answers you may not have been able to discover on your own. Along the way, you will learn:

- To understand what's really keeping you stuck (not always what it appears)
- To reprogram your mind to dash those limiting and long-held beliefs about yourself and others

- To connect with your true self and recognize you already have the answers to your burning questions
- To release the past once and for all
- To embrace the present and the future whilst being open to all possibilities
- To clear your mind so you can find space and time to create
- To identify what you really want, your calling, and your higher purpose

Alex's From Chaos to Clarity puts you back in the driver's seat of your life and reminds you that you can have a life you love! Each chapter provides the tools to get unstuck and to be a deliberate creator of your own life!

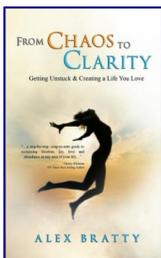

To book Alex Bratty for an empowering and dynamic interview that can get your listeners unstuck in their own lives, please send an email with the name of the show, your contact information, a proposed date and time, and the calling details.

T: will be a full story about the C-A; have been talking on the air about the assassination of JFK, which has to do with a new book – by Dave Talbot

MR: heard on the public TV news: have had 22 hearings about Benghazi and 21 hearings on 9/11 and about what happened in Iraq, Afghanistan – how many hearings there have been and how much $ has been spent and the constant re-hashing – yet more and more 9/11 stuff is coming up

T: will go all the way this time

- “The Devil's Chessboard: Allan Dulles and The Rise of the US Secret Government”
- Allan Dulles did orchestrate what is happening right now; also had help
- They spent $5 million on this hearing alone: they did not get what they wanted as she is in charge of the CIA: Bush Sr is senile; Bush Jr is out of it; she is a clone – and people are not accepting all this either.
- Have to go back to the Black Pope operation when we talk of the killing of JFK –
 - another good Irishman is Patrick Fitzgerald who is now ready – it is so difficult to watch these things come out as it is so vile
- the amount of truth in this next audio:
 - T talks about the migrants in Slovenia: 13,000 mostly Syrian refugees got to Slovenia, and they are being treated abysmally – no blankets, out in the cold; throwing them pieces of bread and the tallest are the ones getting the bread. It is against the rules to have a fire, and the police are constantly going in to make them put the fires out.
- Transmuting these things together is what we are doing

INFORMATION RELATED TO THE NOTES

2015-09-30 New documentary on former Alabama Gov. Don Siegelman set for nationwide release

- Debra Daniel ddaniel@waaytv.com

Amazing life stories often become movies. That's the case for Alabama's last Democratic governor, now serving time in federal prison. Killing Atticus Finch, a new documentary on former Alabama Gov. Don Siegelman, is set to be released next year.

Siegelman was one of the most popular politicians in Alabama, until he was brought up on bribery and other charges and convicted.

The director of the new documentary says the feature length film will be released in theaters nationwide. He says its goal is to show the people of Alabama and the nation Siegelman should never have been charged, tried or convicted.

But there are plenty of others, including the Department of Justice, who say he got what he deserved.

"We have Martin Sheen that will host the documentary and I'm also producing this with Maria Florio and Mimi Kennedy. Maria happens to be an Academy Award winning documentarian," says director Steve Wimberly.

Wimberly says he became interested in documenting Don Siegelman's story two years ago. "I'm very proud of the work we've done so far," he adds.

The title refers to the main character in Harper Lee's To Kill a Mockingbird. Wimberly says both Don Siegelman and fictional character Atticus Finch were Alabama progressives, all-American father figures and both believed in a judicial system that ultimately failed them.

"We're not here to promote Don Siegelman. We're here to tell the whole story," says Wimberly.

The story is one Siegelman, his supporters and family have been telling for a long time.

"Siegelman seemed regularly to beat his conservative opponents, even in the blood-red state of Alabama. That was until Karl Rove orchestrated a plan to indict the popular Democrat on trumped-up charges to keep him off the ballot," says Martin Sheen in the documentary.

Siegelman is the first person in Alabama history to be elected as Secretary of State, Attorney General, Lieutenant Governor and then Governor in 1999.

Running for re-election, he pushed a state lottery that would provide state colleges with tuition for underprivileged students. His supporters claim during that time, Karl Rove pushed state and federal investigators to begin searching for something on Siegelman.

In 2006, an appointment to a health planning board ended up putting Siegelman in prison on bribery, conspiracy and obstruction of justice charges.

Siegelman gave the seat to former Healthsouth CEO Richard Scrushy after Scrushy donated $500,000 to Siegelman's campaign for that statewide lottery.

Joseph Siegelman (Courtesy cochranlawfirm.com)

"I think it's important for your viewers to know that my dad was never convicted of putting any money in his pocket, not one single dime. Every part of this donation went to the lottery campaign," says Joseph Siegelman, now one of his father's attorneys.

He and his sister, Dana, have been working for years to get their father out of prison. The documentary features legal experts who also believe Siegelman should not have been convicted.

"They all come to the same conclusion, that this shouldn't have happened, that he shouldn't be in prison, that this was a wrongful injustice," adds Siegelman.

He and supporters say there's much more to this story. They claim a conflict of interest with a former U.S. Attorney for the Middle District of Alabama, where the case was tried. They also allege witness tampering and a biased judge, Mark Fuller, who gave Siegelman a seven year, three month sentence.

"My dad had (Fuller) investigated when he was governor and that conflict didn't come to light until during the trial, and he continued to remain my dad's judge and actually executed the sentence, which turns out, was three times longer than it should have been," says Siegelman.

We contacted state attorneys, investigators and federal prosecutors in this case. Louis Franklin, the acting U.S. Attorney in the Siegelman case, wrote in one court document that he, in conjunction with the Department of Justice's Public Integrity Section and the Alabama Attorney General's Office made the decision to investigate and prosecute Siegelman based on evidence federal and state investigators uncovered, as well as a federal special grand jury. He also states Karl Rove had no input whatsoever.

The Justice Department sent us this statement: "Mr. Siegelman has been represented by very capable lawyers throughout the case, and he has raised his claims repeatedly in the federal courts. They have all been rejected."

"We will give Karl Rove and his associates every opportunity to tell their side of the story," says Wimberly.

Siegelman is in federal prison in Oakdale, Louisiana. He's set to be released in August 2017, ten months early, thanks to getting some charges dropped during appeals.

"I try to see him once a month, but I rarely can because he's so far away," says Joseph Siegelman.

Oakdale prison didn't respond to our requests to speak to Siegelman.

But he was able to speak to a group in Phoenix, Ariz., in July, during a screening of Killing Atticus Finch.

"Rove knew that if I won the 2002 election I would enter the Democratic Presidential Primaries in 2004 to challenge Bush," said Siegelman in a phone call to Netroots Nation.

Siegelman and his supporters hope this new documentary proves what they've been saying all along.

"He wants nothing more than for the public to find out what happened because the proof has been suppressed, and we have the evidence to prove it," says Wimberly.

"Any objective, intelligent observer of this case wouldn't reach any other conclusion that this was an injustice," adds Joseph Siegelman.

A GoFundMe campaign for the documentary has raised $48,000 with a goal of $90,000.

Joseph Siegelman says his father is in good spirits and is working with other inmates who may have been wrongly imprisoned; and will continue to do that when he's released. We asked what else he thought his dad would do when he gets out and he said "Hopefully not get back into politics."

2015-10-22 Alex Bratty

Alex Bratty is an author and life coach who spent many years using her writing skills to generate corporate research reports before she took the plunge and finally decided to write her first book

She knew from an early age that she was meant to write and share her stories and knowledge with the world, but it took her a long time to figure out how to do that. During her fifteen-year career in research, five of which as a partner in a prestigious Washington, D.C. firm, she knew something was missing; that she wasn't fulfilling her life's purpose.

In her quest to find that missing piece, she embarked on a personal development journey that opened her mind and soul to the realization that she could truly live the life she wanted; that she could be personally happy and professionally fulfilled. Up until then, these elements had been almost mutually exclusive and compartmentalized in her life.

Alex discovered that the true essence of what she wanted was to help people and to be of service in a way that would contribute positively to the world. She chose to write and to become a life coach to fulfill this calling.

As she started down this new path, her first book now seemed so obvious after many years of wondering what to write about. Alex understood she had to share her experience of getting unstuck from a life that felt constricted, frustrated, and tense to one that was expansive, creative, and joyful.

Her deepest hope is that her book and her coaching help others who are having similar experiences to more easily navigate their challenges; to help them get unstuck and create an amazing life that they love. She lives by the belief that we can all find happiness, abundance, and joy; that we just need to discover what we truly want, rather than what we think we should want.

When she's not writing, Alex combines her love of connecting with people on a soul level with her corporate background to provide a safe, nurturing, and productive environment for the clients she coaches.

Alex earned her Bachelor's degree at Edinburgh University in Scotland for dual honors in Business Studies and French in 1997. She then attained her Masters of Business Administration from Villanova, PA in 2001. After many years of living on the east coast, she now lives in Las Vegas with her husband and their Golden Retriever, Sunny.

2015-10-13 Outsourcing a Refugee Crisis: U.S. Paid Mexico Millions to Target Central Americans Fleeing Violence http://www.democracynow.org/2015/10/13/outsourcing_a_refugee_crisis_us_paid

Guests Sonia Nazario

Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist and author of Enrique's Journey: The Story of a Boy's Dangerous Odyssey to Reunite with His Mother. Her recent piece in The New York Times is called "The Refugees at Our Door."

As immigration has become a key issue on the campaign trail, we look at a startling new report that finds "the United States has outsourced a refugee problem to Mexico that is similar to the refugee crisis now roiling Europe." In her New York Times opinion piece, "The Refugees at Our Door," Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist Sonia Nazario describes how the Obama administration is paying the Mexican government to keep people from reaching the U.S. border—people who often have legitimate asylum claims. We speak to Nazario about the harrowing stories she heard from Central American refugees in shelters in southern Mexico.

AMY GOODMAN: As Democratic presidential candidates kick off the first debate of the 2016 presidential race tonight, the issue of immigration has emerged as a key issue on the campaign trail. On Thursday, Hillary Clinton addressed the Congressional Hispanic Caucus Institute's 38th Annual Awards Gala and called for a more humane immigration policy. She also denounced what she called the "ugly" anti-immigrant rhetoric coming from Republican presidential candidates.

HILLARY CLINTON: It's a problem when a leading Republican candidate for president says that immigrants from Mexico are rapists and drug dealers. It's a problem when candidates use offensive terms like "anchor babies" or even talk about changing the Constitution to take citizenship away from those who were born here. We need people who will stand up to this ugly rhetoric and extreme thinking, who will say—who will say with our words and our actions, "Basta! Enough! End this!"

AMY GOODMAN: Earlier this year, Democratic presidential hopeful Bernie Sanders called for comprehensive immigration reform. This is Sanders addressing the National Association of Latino Elected and Appointed Officials conference in Las Vegas.

SEN. BERNIE SANDERS: It is not acceptable to me, and, I think, a growing majority of the American people, that millions of folks in this country are working extremely hard, but they are living in the shadows. And that has got to end. ... Despite the essential role that undocumented workers play in our economy and in our daily lives, these workers are too often reviled by many for political gain and shunted into the shadows. Let me be very clear as to where I stand: It is time for this disgraceful situation to end.

AMY GOODMAN: Well, we turn now to a startling new report that examines America's broken immigration system, called "The Refugees at Our Door," just published in The New York Times by Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist Sonia Nazario. The article suggests the Obama administration is paying the Mexican government to keep people from reaching the U.S. border—people who often have legitimate asylum claims, and once deterred in their journey, often left to die.

Nazario writes, quote, "In the past 15 months, at the request of President Obama, Mexico has carried out a ferocious crackdown on refugees fleeing violence in Central America. The United States has given Mexico tens of millions of dollars for the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30 to stop these migrants from reaching the United States border to claim asylum. Essentially the United States has outsourced a refugee problem to Mexico that is similar to the refugee crisis now roiling Europe."

Well, for more, we go to Los Angeles, where we're joined by Sonia Nazario. She is the author of Enrique's Journey: The Story of a Boy's Dangerous Odyssey to Reunite with His Mother.

SONIA NAZARIO: Thank you.

AMY GOODMAN: Explain what you found. How is the U.S. paying Mexico to stop migrants from coming north?

SONIA NAZARIO: Well, we're doing the exact opposite of what Germany is doing. And, you know, I should say that I think we can have a debate about what should be done about economic migrants, people who come here for a better life, but with refugees, that is someone who is being persecuted, and they are fleeing for their lives. And in Germany, we've seen these emotional images of the German people and Angela Merkel opening their doors, welcoming them at train stations. And what we are doing as a country is we have paid Mexico tens of millions of dollars to stop these refugees from arriving at our border and claiming, asking for refuge, asking for asylum. Our State Department is funding this. And our congressional leaders, the Department of State has said in a recent document that they want to spend $90 million next fiscal year, in 2016, to do more of this. And what we're seeing is that this is paying for this incredible crackdown, where the immigration authorities have increased immensely the number of deportees. Mexico, in the first seven months, deported 23,000 more Central Americans than the United States, and it plans to up that amount by 70 percent this year, while the rate is cut by the United States. So we're asking Mexico basically to do our dirty work. President Obama, for politically expedient reasons, 15 months ago, wanted this problem, as he saw it, of these immigrant children coming to the United States alone, this surge, to go away, and so he outsourced his problem to Mexico.

AMY GOODMAN: Can you tell us the story of July Elizabeth Pérez, who you met in a migrant shelter in Mexico?

SONIA NAZARIO: Yes, last month I spent seven or eight days in Mexico. I felt that not enough attention was being focused on this. And July, first, you know, she lives in one of the most deadly towns in Honduras, which the homicide rate has recently declined some, but per the last U.N. report, worldwide, had the highest homicide rate in the world, after Syria. And she lived in this very deadly town controlled largely by the 18th Street gang, a gang that, by the way, started here in Los Angeles, where I live. And first, her brother was abducted, and he was killed. They stole his $91 in rent money that he was taking to pay. They cut off his feet and his hands when they killed him. And then they abducted her 14-year-old son. They had asked him to join the gang. They start doing this to children at very young ages—nine, 10, 12 years old. He was 14. He had gone on a short errand a few steps away with a friend, been kidnapped. And she frantically searched for him and found him a few hours later. He had been suffocated to death with a bag over his head and found in a garbage bag. She fled to another city three hours away. And seven months later—you know, the gangs are incredibly good at intelligence. They beat the CIA by a mile in figuring out who's coming in and out of towns and where—the movement of people who are escaping gang violence. And she got a warning: "We know where you are now."

So, seven months later she fled to Mexico, trying to reach her mother, grandmother, who were legally in the United States. She applied to the U.S. Embassy for a visa. They turned her down. And so her only choice to save her three remaining children was to try to get through Mexico to the United States. And it took her 20 days to travel 250 miles. These migrants are walking through Mexico now, because they cannot get on the trains—ride on top of freight trains, as they used to do, because of this crackdown. And she encountered all sorts of obstacles—immigration officials shooting at her on top of the train with her children aboard, having to go around these enormous number of checkpoints, raids now—20,000 raids on immigrants just in the past year as part of this Southern Border Plan, as it's called, that was pushed by President Obama.

AMY GOODMAN: Is it fair to say the U.S. is bankrolling these Mexican border guards who, in a number of cases, are guilty of horrendous human rights abuses?

SONIA NAZARIO: Yes, it's absolutely true we are bankrolling this—tens of millions of dollars last year and, as I said, $90 million proposed by the Department of State this year, and that doesn't count what the Department of Defense has been kicking in, an unknown amount. And many, many studies have shown that Mexican officials, both the federal police, the state police, and immigration officials are complicit in this robbery, rape, killing of immigrants as they try to travel north to the United States to safety. And we see children now walking the length of Mexico trying to allude those officials, and women like July putting their children, her three-year-old, her six-year-old—her six-year-old walking for days on end, for 12 hours at a time, putting her three-year-old on her shoulders, trying to get her north through Mexico to the United States to safety.

I think what we are doing is shameful. Refugees are people fleeing harm, and we should at least give them a chance of proving that they are refugees. And if they aren't, then perhaps send them back. But we have signed protocols saying that we will protect refugees. We have urged other countries, like Germany and the countries surrounding Syria, who have taken in more than 4 million refugees. We get a few tens of thousands, and instead of trying to comprehend what they're going through and welcome them, or at least put them through our judicial system and see if they qualify or not, we have paid Mexico to send them back to their deaths. There is a study by our social researcher that just came out showing that in the last 21 months, 90 people, at least, have been murdered shortly after being returned by the United States and Mexico to their home countries, in these three very violent countries in Central America, including a 14-year-old boy returned to Honduras, Gredis. Within 24 hours of being returned home, he had two bullets in his head. This is what our policies are causing.

And I think the American people need to say, "This must stop. I do not want this done in my name. I do not want my taxpayer money funding this." And I have a letter on my website, EnriquesJourney.com, if you agree, to send your congressional leader, saying that you want a fairer policy towards refugee children, in particular.

AMY GOODMAN: Last year, Democracy Now! spoke to Jose Luis Zelaya. He fled his home in Honduras at the age of 13 in search of his mother. He traveled unaccompanied through Central America, finally reached Houston four months later. Zelaya described his journey.

JOSE LUIS ZELAYA: Honduras is a very dangerous country. Once, I was simply playing soccer, and there was a drive-by shooting, and during the soccer game I ended up being shot twice in both of my arms. And it was then when I made the decision that I needed to run away. I needed to leave the—I needed to leave Honduras and come to the United States to find my mother. I didn't know where she was. All I knew was the area code, 713, which was the Houston area code.

And I came to the United States. It took me 45 days to come. It was horrible. It is the worst experience that I have ever witnessed—to be thirsty and not have water, to be hungry and not have food. Not even a trashcan, to be able to find food, was available in the desert. Whenever you're riding the train and you see people lose their lives, you see little girls being physically abused by the coyotes, and you can't do anything because you're a child. I was 11—I was 13 years old when I came. I knew—I wasn't trying to break the law; I was trying to fulfill the law by trying to reunite with my mother, by trying to reunite with my sister.

And when I came to the United States, I was actually in a detention center, as well, in Harlingen, Texas, and the experience there were very difficult. We were only allowed to see the sunlight one hour a week, and we were only allowed to drink water three times a day.

AMY GOODMAN: That's Jose Luis Zelaya, who fled his home in Honduras at the age of 13. You yourself rode, on top of seven freight trains, the length of Mexico with child migrants a decade ago. How does what they go through today compare, Sonia Nazario?

SONIA NAZARIO: Well, I think, you know, it was certainly difficult back then. I still have post-traumatic stress, to indicate how hard it was. And as Luis mentioned, it was very difficult. Many people are robbed, raped, beaten, back then. But we've seen just in the last year an 81 percent increase in robberies. And you're seeing, by the time people get to the shelter, the migrant shelter—which really has become a refugee camp, by the way—a few—just 200, 300 miles inside the southern border of Mexico, 95 percent now are robbed by the time they get there, some of them multiple times. The majority of the women are being raped. And so, what you're seeing is an exponential increase in the harm being done to these migrants, both by the immigration authorities and by this whole army of delinquents, that have taken the message from the Mexican authorities: "It's open season on migrants. You can do whatever you want, because we need to get—at the U.S., you know, bidding, we need to get this flow to stop, to get these people not to reach the United States border."

And so, what we're seeing is, instead of riding on top of that train, on top of the freight trains up the length of Mexico, as I did for my book, Enrique's Journey, people are going in places that are harder, that they are more isolated. And that's where these delinquents have all risen up that are robbing and raping and killing in extraordinary numbers. Twenty thousand Central Americans are being disappeared every single year, kidnapped. And many of these people resurface after someone in the United States has to pay ransom to release them. But if you can't pay, they will kill you. They will cut you up in front of the others as a message. Many of them are being enslaved to work in marijuana fields or digging tunnels, prostituted. They are finding people—14 migrants recently awoke, drugged up, with slits on the side of their bodies, wounds that had been sewn up. Their kidneys had been harvested. It's another level and a higher number of robberies, rapes, killings that are happening today than when Luis made the journey and when I made the journey. And yeah, you had to convince me that this was a lot tougher than before, but it is tougher than before. It is extraordinarily hard.

And that's why people are stopping 200 to 300 miles in at this shelter that I was at and saying, "I can't go back. They will kill me in my country. But I can't go forward. They will kill me in Mexico. I'm going to try to get asylum. I'm going to try to get a humanitarian visa from Mexico," which, by the way, Mexico makes extraordinarily difficult to get. They try to put every barrier possible to apply for asylum. If you're detained, they basically don't inform you of your right to asylum, which they are supposed to do, per Mexican law. Only one in 10 people are being informed. If you're informed, they try to dissuade you from applying. And if you're even able to apply, which only 2,000 folks were able to do last year, they hold you in these jails that have rats roaming by day, worms in the food. They try to do everything possible to discourage you. And only 20 percent—you stay there months, or even a year, if you appeal. Only 20 percent of people who are able to apply win their asylum claims, versus 50 percent in the United States. So Mexico is putting every potential obstacle they can in the course of people trying to reach our borders and say, "Help me. They are trying to kill me in my country. I cannot go back. And now I cannot move forward. I am stuck."

AMY GOODMAN: Sonia, the man we just heard from, the young man who moved here when he—who traveled here when he was 13, Jose Luis Zelaya, is with the group United We Dream. And that's the same group that protested Hillary Clinton. We just played a clip of her speaking in Las Vegas. She was actually heckled there by United We Dream. And one of the protesters, Juan Carlos Ramos, issued a statement saying, "Our message to Hillary Clinton is simple: immigrant youth do not trust you." They were protesting the fact that private prison corporations donate to Clinton's campaign, and they said she should reject that money. What about the prisons here in the United States?

SONIA NAZARIO: Well, we've managed to get a law passed in Congress that 34,000 deportable immigrants will be locked up any night in our prison system. As we've locked up fewer nonviolent drug offenders, we have—the prison industry has found a way to fill those jails with immigrants. And that’s absolutely true. It’s gone from $800 million or so, seven, eight years ago, that they made off of immigrants, to more than $2 billion. This is a huge industry for them. And they spend a lot of money at this. And we can get laws like that passed through our Congress, but when we try to get a law allocating $50 million to immigrant children so a four-year-old doesn’t stand before our immigration judges being asked to present their asylum claim all by themselves—we don’t allocate immigration lawyers to immigrant children who come here alone, and so you see these children shaking with utter fear before that judge—well, that law got shot down by the Senate. So, it’s absolutely true that the prison industry wants to keep this going. And companies like Corrections Corp. of America and GEO have made a lot of money off of this.

I think instead of what we are doing, we need to push our government to do what Germany is doing, which is to establish a system, be a leader in terms of refugees and establish a system to allow these refugees to arrive at our border and claim asylum, and then redistribute these migrants to Canada, to Latin America, and, yes, some to the United States, so that they are safe, while we address the root causes of this violence, help these countries address the root causes in Latin America. You know, we only take in 70,000 refugees a year. Germany, that dinky country in Europe, will take in more than 10 times that number this year. I think we can afford to go up to at least 130,000—that’s what we took in pre-9/11—to allow especially these children to have a safe harbor in this country. And instead of paying Mexico to turn them away, we should also pay them to make sure that they are screened for asylum. Mexico only has 20 asylum officers in the whole country, three offices. They have purposefully underfunded this.

AMY GOODMAN: You choose to use the word "migrant" and "refugee" rather than "immigrant." Why, Sonia?

SONIA NAZARIO: Well, I think with a refugee, it is a person who is being persecuted in their home country, and they are fleeing harm. And this is what I saw when I went to Honduras 14 months ago. I saw children—you know, we spend billions of dollars to stop the flow of drugs coming from Venezuela and Colombia up the Caribbean corridor to the Dominican Republic, Jamaica, Haiti. They were landing there, those drug flights. We spend all this taxpayer money, and what did the narcos do? They simply rerouted, and they’re now landing four of five narco flights in Honduras. And so, they are trying to control that turf to move drugs north to us, the largest consumer of illegal drugs on Earth. We use one in four illegal drugs on Earth.

And they are recruiting children to control that turf, to serve as lookouts, to sell drugs in those neighborhoods, and to work as sicarios, to kill people, ultimately. And I saw children as young as 11. I spoke to an 11-year-old boy in a piece I did 14 months ago in The New York Times. He said, "I’m 11 years old. I’m in the sixth grade. And these narcos are telling me as I come out of my elementary school, which they control, 'You are going to start using crack. And if you don’t—and get hooked on crack and start working for us—we are going to kill you.'" And so, your options, for a lot of these children, are start working for the gangs, start working for the narcos that the gangs often report to, or flee. Those are the options.

And what we’re seeing is, the kids coming through Mexico are younger and younger, a half that are caught in Mexico 11 and younger, and more of them are girls. The girls I saw in that neighborhood, they were—40 percent now of the girls—of the children caught in Mexico now are girls. They are being taught—told, "You will be my girlfriend," by the gang leader, the narco leader, "or I’m going to kill you, I’m going to exterminate your whole family." And so, I’m seeing many more girls and women coming through Mexico. At the shelter I was at, there was a 28-year-old woman. She had been kidnapped by the gang, the 18th Street gang, in her neighborhood, that’s basically the law in her neighborhood. There is no government to turn to in certain parts of Honduras. And she came out of her job. They grabbed her, four gangsters, took her to a house. And there was a man tied up there, and they forced her to watch as they beat this man to death, stabbed him in his arms and legs, and then cut him up in pieces—she doesn’t know if he was alive or dead when that happened—and then forced her to hold the garbage bag as they put his pieces into it and told her, "You’re going to be my girlfriend tomorrow, or this is what will happen to you tomorrow." She fled without even saying goodbye to her four children, without giving them a hug, because she thought they would have questions, and that might put them in greater danger. She fled to Mexico, where she is now at, at that shelter, trying to get through Mexico and trying to reach safety in the United States. This is what people are fleeing, and this is very different from someone who is an immigrant coming here for a better life, like my parents came here from Argentina. They wanted a better life for themselves, but they were not fleeing for their lives.

AMY GOODMAN: Well, I want to thank you very much, Sonia Nazario. Your piece is just astounding in The New York Times. We will link to it, called "The Refugees at Our Door." #16 Yu Enthusiasm

Below: K'un Earth

The Wisdom:

You are asleep

Oh No

Thunder comes

You are awake

Oh Yes

The beginning of an era is in play. Thunder roars from the belly of the earth. So deep and so loud that it feels like your pelvis is rattling.....and in many ways it is....at the pelvic floor is the energy of the first chakra. It is pure unadulterated excitement signaling that the time of the Great Excitement is here.

The arousal you feel stirring deep within has come as a reward for the all the hard work, losses and the obstacles to love that you have overcome---you are feeling that stirring of old anger that you suppressed. Yu is giving you instructions on how to use this time of stirring anger to quickly shift to excitement and enthusiasm.

There are events that have just begun or are about to be placed before you that can either serve you or destroy you. Again you face the conundrum of yin and yang. Yu says there is a choice to be made: you can choose to use this time of enthusiasm to bring light and love to your projects and to those around you; or you can allow this great force to cause you to retreat, while sinking into the familiar tired and old depression. You do not have to buy into what has been programmed into the societal mind. It says: you are being threatened with loss and danger so you must have done something to bring it to you. Not true...do not go for it...this time, this opposition is the gift you have asked for to show you your strength and to enliven the knowing that you are not alone. You have your tribe, your community of fellow pilgrims, whether they are in reaching distance or not they are there they are your allies on the march to freedom. Simply in that knowing is the strength and the core of the energetic flow, which is knowledge. This is the ticket to ride that has been just out of reach. Know the flow is here and the benefit is to fearlessly reach out and take it.

Be aware that a thunderclap, which is what this wakeup is akin to, lasts only a moment, just as this time of great arousal and enthusiasm will last only a moment in the larger scheme of things. So, use it or lose it. But don't lose it—be joyful and celebrate. This is the proper action to seal the deal.

Gather your tribe around you.
Celebrate that the time of arrival is here.
Balance enthusiasm with spirit;
You are renewed.

The sound of thunder is stirring the pot. It is a call to lead those around you to operate at a higher and more joyful vibration. At the same time, you are moving into a battle within yourself--- not with external forces. The idea that the obstacle is coming from the realms of not doing the right thing is the egos trick to confuse you into a frantic state where you cannot tell yin from yang. Yu's instructions on how to emerge victorious from this battle may at first blush seem weak or frivolous, but they are not. There is within reach a magical elixir that confers victory; that elixir is devotion, kindness and celebration. Celebrate with those around you; raise the vibration by offering joy, love, and spirit. Celebrate that you have come to know yourself better; celebrate that you have learned you cannot do this great task before you alone. And in all walk with your head held high for all to see.

Trust that you have become empowered to be the voice, the touch to bring all together in celebration and, with that, your tribal brothers and sisters will emerge from behind the curtain as you lead all in celebration. It is that easy, because celebration, a form of ritual, is the natural way of our shared human condition.

Celebration is food for the body, mind, and spirit; so pull out all the stops. This is a time of no limitations. It is a time of vast expansion, and you need do nothing other than celebrate in dignity the events, times, and passages of life on earth for the clarity of your way to be revealed.

In joy and celebration
The curtain that has hidden
Love, abundance, and success
Is now rising.

When the seasons change and thunder comes, it releases tension that has been building up. This is nothing less than a change of seasons and a change in your way of thinking. N.B. a great store of energy is now about to be released. The benefit will be not to squander this energy in actions that do not serve the greater good; you are advised to adhere to the universal laws of compassion, fairness, and generosity.

Use this well-earned force to raise the spirits of all those around you. Be the leader you truly are in your field of endeavor and in your primary relationships, family, tribe and community. At the same time, be humble in the face of this great force of joy and completion. This release of tension will cause tears and laughter, both a similar and blessed release and you will be shining like the sun and feel your first chakra power of sex, light and love.

Lead all into a time of joyful celebration. Carpe Diem: Seize this moment and seize these days before you with compassion, enthusiasm, and love. In doing so, you will gain a deep confidence in yourself that will be your pillar of strength when you must deal with difficulties further down the line.

Thunder over earth denotes that a powerful energy of spirit has been building is now being released. So it is with you now. You have just passed through a difficult period of time where you felt judged and feared you were slipping out of favor and the internal voice of the bothersome coyote has been telling you are out of step. This is not the case; you are better placed than you might have thought. The crash of thunder is signaling a dynamic change, and you are being called to let those around you know that the time of change has arrived. Celebrate it and it will be so. That is the magic---your magic.

Like thunder, enthusiasm cannot be controlled, regulated, or held in reserve. Enthusiasm just is. Within the nature of enthusiasm are great gifts of inspiration and confidence. The movement is to operate in harmony with the earth and allow this moment to activate your personal power and to enhance your spiritual path.

I often hear people say that they have no formal spiritual path but do have a belief in something that is difficult to pin down. This is where the teaching power of enthusiasm and arousal come into play—through celebration. Celebration, being a form of ritual or ceremony, is in itself a spiritual act. No need to qualify it—just let it be.

Make recent events a reason to bring your fellows, your tribe, together, and lead them in celebration. Signify you are alive to dance to the rhythms of the earth. As Gibran said in The Prophet, "Sing, dance, and be joyous, but let each of you stand alone for the pillars of the temple stand apart and the oak and the cypress grow not in each others shadow." This is what we all must do, and will benefit from doing it now and not just for ourselves: dance for our earth, our Goddess Gaia and all her sentient beings they/we need it now.

A window of opportunity is wide open. Break the cycle of procrastination. Plan it, build it, honor it, and celebrate it. The it, of course, is generated by and for you. Celebrate your successes, whether in art, business, love, in your creation and support of family. Give or go to a party. Bring the tribes together. Get off the couch...stop lying to yourself and demonstrate your love for her, him, them, and your own sweet self. Be the thunder and awaken the spirit of love and celebration in all those around you. Celebration is the path of least resistance. Use it. These are the immutable laws of the universe and the human condition. And in the end we are just that: delightfully and magically human.

It is in ways like these that we have the opportunity to make the world a better place—the world we all want—as we strive for the greater good of all. We are in the very beginning of a new age, a new era, where peace is possible. With enough love it will be so—Teach Peace every day and Be the love you desire

Sing, flirt, laugh, and heal.
Raise the vibe man,
Raise the vibe.

I send you enough,

BobbyK
