

MARCH 2017 COUNTRY BRIEFING

Wednesday, March 8, 2017

12:00 – 13:00 (EST)

In-Person & Online

INSSA and Navanti will be co-hosting a country briefing to discuss the current situation in one of three countries: Syria, Turkey, or Yemen. Navanti is an applied analytics company, making complex environments accessible through actionable data and helping clients operate in countries across Africa, Eurasia, and the Middle East through data analytics, crowdsourcing, and custom applied solutions.

For example, in Syria, Navanti has an in-house team of Syria analysts who work daily with a network of researchers on the ground in areas that include Idlib Province, Kurdish-held areas, and ISIS-held territories. Its analysts focus on issues of security, market and route conditions, governance bodies, military factions and other key groups, ethnic fault lines, and more.

This is an opportunity for INSSA members to get bespoke, in-depth research and analysis on the issues facing the safety & security of international development and humanitarian aid staff, operations, and organizations operating in Syria and nearby areas affected by the conflict.

In order to identify which country will be the focus of this briefing and ensure the information and analysis presented at the event addresses the issues, questions, and concerns most relevant to attendees, INSSA kindly request you complete the pre-event questionnaire found below:
