HARD NEWS

- T: T & R have been told that this is a Black Op! We have to take responsibility as it has to do with the way a society thinks
- The two who were killed were orphaned as very young children & raised in Moroccan culture in France
 - The US has two Banners: the Moroccan-Moorish banner and the basis of

- The two were drugged and programmed by the US CIA; the result of the societal thing is that they were not educated

R: spoke with Larry & Curly: yes, they were mind-controlled and programmed to do this: love them even more for what they have chosen to do on this path, seemingly without love.

- L & C shared: it all goes back to 9/11 where no one in the Bush Administration has done any hard time; to this very hour, Carl Rove is still free collecting $ for the Koch Bros and himself, and along with Bush, they outed a CIA agent.
- They said Mother is patient as she waits for her prey; they are going to go through the Dark Rift
- Bill Clinton is involved with the Epstein case [the one involving Andrew, Prince of York] – girls of 12 years olds, maybe younger:
 - BC has to answer to Mother and AA Michael – this is intergalactic as well as interuniversal – love him even more on his way out.

Audio: Scott Horton: Lords of Secrecy – Thom Hartmann

R: in 1947, the Roswell Incident; the OSS turned into the CIA, FBI and MJ12 – they created the organizations to cover up the idea that those in the ships came to warn us not to use nukes!

- Also, A sighting over Maryland, 1995, a huge triangular ship showed up!

US intellectual investment and Pres. Obama's community college plan
January 10, 2015 07:00

In tonight's Big Picture Rumble, Thom talks US intellectual investment and President Obama's community college plan, Sen. Elizabeth Warren calling out Reaganomics, the FCC considering White House net neutrality rules, Congress considering raising the gas tax and if a higher carbon tax should be considered, and whether the US should reconsider its relationship with Saudi Arabia after a Saudi blogger was publicly flogged for insulting Islam. Peter Roff, contributing editor at US News & World Report, Christy Setzer, president & CEO of New Heights Communications and Shelby Emmett, National Advisory Counsel at Project 21 join the conversation.

In tonight's "Conversations with Great Minds," Thom talks with Scott Horton, contributing editor at Harper's Magazine and author of "Lords of Secrecy: The National Security Eldite and America's Stealth Warfare."

Lords of Secrecy: The National Security Elite and America's Stealth Warfare Hardcover – January 6, 2015

Forty years ago, a majority of Americans were highly engaged in issues of war and peace. Whether to go to war or keep out of conflicts was a vital question at the heart of the country's vibrant, if fractious, democracy. But American political consciousness has drifted. In the last decade, America has gone to war in Iraq and Afghanistan, while pursuing a new kind of warfare in Yemen, Somalia, Libya, and Pakistan. National security issues have increasingly faded from the political agenda, due in part to the growth of government secrecy.

In lucid and chilling detail, journalist and lawyer Scott Horton shows how secrecy has changed the way America functions. Executive decisions about war and peace are increasingly made by autonomous, self-directing, and unaccountable national security elites. Secrecy is justified as part of a bargain under which the state promises to keep the people safe from its enemies, but in fact allows excesses, mistakes, and crimes to go unchecked. Bureaucracies use secrets to conceal their mistakes and advance their power in government, invariable at the expense of the rights of the people. Never before have the American people had so little information concerning the wars waged in their name, nor has Congress exercised so little oversight over the war effort. American democracy is in deep trouble.

Lords of Secrecy explores the most important national security debates of our time, including the legal and moral issues surrounding the turn to private security contractors, the sweeping surveillance methods of intelligence agencies, and the use of robotic weapons such as drones. Horton looks at the legal edifice upon which these decisions are based and discusses approaches to rolling back the flood of secrets that is engulfing America today. Whistleblowers, but also Congress, the public, and the media, play a vital role in this process.

As the ancient Greeks recognized, too much secrecy changes the nature of the state itself, transforming a democracy into something else. Horton reminds us that dealing with the country's national security concerns is both a right and a responsibility of a free citizenry, something that has always sat at the heart of any democracy that earns the name. T: mentioned Dick Cheney being in charge

- one minute we were not going into Libya, next minute they did
- this is the time when Obama split from Hillary: he went to South America and talked to the lady presidents of several companies, using the US flag WITHOUT A FRINGEA: ie, inside NESARA law
- Hillary went to Libya and set other things in motion.

Conference Call

Mr McGoo: what is the latest on General Carter Ham?

- Said to be the interim president when the announcement takes place
- a total lie, total black Ops! That group hates the Black man in the White House!
- Mr 19.5 are doing fine, thank you very much! R would say Ham has violated his Oath of Office
- This has nothing to do with Faction 3 White Knights
- Interesting that he claims to become the "interim president": president of WHAT?

MMG: understands that he was to be in front of Congress this week

- What is the name of the group that puts out that info?

MMG: he was told about it – does not read so much due to eyesight

- anything connected to saying such thing has no validity: not connected with St Germain, Ascended Masters and other beings

Tommy: do they remember Tim Turner of a few years ago? The Ron Van Dyke guy who has videos out – was connected to some governor or other:

- he listened to these people a few years ago – not impressed: had a rep from each state; had a constitution and wanted to take over this gov't -

MMG – this is where these people passed on the idea of the republic to replace our current corrupt gov't –

- yet they are too incompetent to run the country
- So now they go to the dinar forums and other sites, and talk about the new republic – they want to bring something back that never worked: it has all been Illuminati from the beginning
- And to trust what some Ham-burger will say – they don't understand that to have a big change to occur requires having someone like the Commander-in-Chief say what is going to happen
- The President is the only one people will believe – he has the background, gravity

T: Rainbird said something last night about Master Dang a Viet Nameese Master and how to access Universal Energy: no matter what comes up on the table, go to the galactic, the Divine and the highest good for all concerned.

- She has never ever heard so many different takes on a story [as those being offered right now about the shootings in France] and such deep insight on the Islamic teachings

- we have to realize the US was founded on MOORISH PRINCIPLES. St Germain was a Moor, as was his mother, Queen Elizabeth 1; they aligned themselves with the Moorish principles
 - the 1774 Declaration of Independence was based on Moorish teachings
- The two boys who were killed were of Moorish background though both born in France
- the CIA has done a good job of getting the people afraid of Islamic people – all Black Ops of the reptilian kind, though there are good reptilians like the crocodile people who guarded Karnak in Egypt, Mother's temple.
- True Islam is a totally different story: also there were 2 Mohammads – the 2nd one was programmed, chipped and introduced a fundamentalist type of Islam – like the Christian fundamentalism which is also very reptilian!
- The whole society on earth has gone askew – to sit back and say nothing else matters – yes, we need jobs but not in the setting of doing the bidding of the reptiles
- Tom the Cat told them: Netanyahu is next on the list – a Zionist, a Kharzarian
 - The Kharzarian Zionists have been running the US -
 - good night Netanyahu; good night Lakud Party; good night people who think they can kill others because they call them less than human [the Palestinians, as referred to by Israelis]
 - These 2 boys were caught in this – the programs of the reptilians [who are] very intelligent,
 - in 2008, she listened to David Wilcox telling his story about being invited to Mantauk: [his father worked for the CIA; David was tagged for use when he was only 7]
 - DW witnessed homeless children, young black kids; the CIA paid them a little money, then they put the kids in the chair and they were killed by the CIA.
 - David was not clear about the fact that once you are a member of the agency, you know too much. Now he has taken $ from the agency & has been bought lock, stock & barrel.

Tommy: most people do not have the attention span of a gnat, and will dismiss what people say because they don't like something about the way that person looks or said something: we need to be able to hear what others say too.

- This is a galactic story: what do galactics behave like? What is this about?
- People live by the matrix – if we cannot process our own stuff and listen to what is being said by the universe, we won't know what is going on.

T: we have always been galactics, nothing less: meaning we have the knowledge of the universe and can access it

Tommy: tries to make the complicated simple in his life:

- The Constitution is important because of the response of the people
- the Admiralty, Law of the Sea – the constitution applies to them: they cannot tell the American people they are not US citizens - it's a matter of subject matter jurisdiction - the last name on the drivers licence, birth certificate is a US citizen, but the physical body of each of us is not!
- So they treat us contemptuously, condescendingly – now he understands why: our so-called free will is being used against us – as Rama has been saying for a long time: the mistrust has to leave the scene in order for authenticity to come: the truth has been criminalized and is foreign

MMG: has a friend who helps him get things done, due to MMG's poor eyesight

- The friend has been fighting with the IRS – what he has done is gone from the public side to the private side: last week, he sent the special office the last 9 years of his IRS info – this office on the private side makes up its own fictitious money order to IRS –
- MMG is gleaning a lot about that, wants to find out other things about what is happening on the private side. The friend is being guided through this maze
- Now there is another thing: there is a St Germain Trust out of Arkansas &, because of the World Trust, will make payments to those on the list they have

T: the St Germain trust is a complete fraud: DO NOT GIVE YOUR NAME TO ANYONE!

MMG: will pass on what he knows to be true

T: T & R have a connection to Faction 3, and he can bring news back to MMG

- this information on the St Germain Trust went through this network a year or so ago

Tommy: There is a lot of disinformation going on

T: has been listening for weeks on these discussions: we [the People] have been feeling for decades that we cannot deal with the overlords; we try to get along somehow without getting whacked and have some kind of life.

- Now we are completely breaking through; what we are seeing is so systemic, so corrupt, so much voidness of spirit – now the whole world – the 12 people lost their lives on a huge issue!
 - the world knows that Al Quada is a black ops AND that the controlling forces are also floundering
- the dollar is $1.16 to the Euro – one more penny and it is gonzo! The Euro was put into the mix to take out the dollar! In 1971, the dollar lost all of its value in terms of being a precious metal backed system; to order take the dollar out, the plan was to lower the price of oil and force the dollar down,
- In general, people are so savvy – about 5 years ago, bit coin was created; it relies on neither gold or oil.
 - This teaches us that everything we thought was real is not!
 - Even now the reptiles figure out a way to jostle the bit coin situation; within 3 or 4 weeks, the bit coin has weathered the storm and comes back

Tommy: and that is why no one has any business going into a court room

T & R knew all about this: when they went to court in Colorado, Rama had to speak, and they brought all their Sovereign classmates and the teacher.

- Rama started by saying: With all due respect, that is not my name!" There was an awareness in the room that this was going to be interesting!
- They had spoken to the D A before they went into the courtroom; he asked how they would plead?
- T said there is not enough information here to do anything! The DA was so annoyed with them that he put them as the last case of the day, as he had no other comeback to what they had said!
- The court broke for lunch, all the class & the teacher discussed the situation over lunch
- When it was all said & done, there were a whole bunch of people watching and getting educated!
- When other cases were finished, no one left the courtroom; they just sat and watched what happened to T & R, who had been pushed to the back of the line by an angry DA!

T: She is elated by what is coming on the news: people getting down to the nitty gritty!

- Rachel put out a message to the world: whoever did this operation, we will find you no matter where you are in the planet.
- Anonymous always says: "We do not forgive; we do not forget." and they too put out a notice to the world. Socrates said it more gently: you must hold accountable what happened before this moment, or you cannot move forward.

Tommy: this is why he does not see people getting rich on the dinars: they do not understand their own participation in the crimes against humanity; to let them run loose with all the money makes no sense.

T: need to back up the truck: in 2009 or so when the conversations were getting longer and longer with Oke and involved with the dinar calls: bottom line was they were NEVER GOING TO PAY THIS OUT!

Tommy: finds it interesting – people need to be traumatized to get out of the situation that we were traumatized into when we started in this life.

- Money has been used to control people; religion has controlled the whole planet. Those in the blogs and forums are all giddy over money, and think god will bless that money and them.
- He talks about what people will do with all the money: bigger home, more stuff, better dinner parties and that, in the end, having all the money and stuff does not further relationships with other people or with one's own spirit life.

T: he's hit the nail on the head: a big difference between getting money from dinars or from NESARA

- the entire Illuminati will be gone; the money system will be gone and now we are in Divine

Government with the galactics walking beside us: NOTHING LESS WILL SOLVE THIS.

- Cannot kill a good idea with a gun or a sword. The nature of our being is to gravitate to the light
- We asked to co-create everything with Mother who does not create anything that is not equal to her – and we forgot about that!
- The first move they made was to try and eliminate Mother – impossible!

Tommy: Brings up the sentence used by many people: “If it's too good to be true, it probably isn't”

- That is why people do not have anything that is “ too good to be true” because they don't believe it!! The Law of Attraction does work, but when you try to attract money, it's fiction – you get none.

T: that principle goes along with what the natives taught Greg Bradin:

- don't pray “for” anything: we will “pray rain”, not “pray for rain”
- praying “for something” pushes receiving that something into the future

We can “pray money”: yet still have to know what we are praying for: money is the root of all evil.

- Money needs a definition: money is what you symbolize it as. Since Jan 2007, the IRS was gone
 - there is no money coming from the hands of evil because it means evil gave it to you.
- In a spiritual sense, there is a way to make things work: it is in dying to all that is illusion, we are born to the reality of spirit . All we can do is give peace a chance!

Caller 3: praise the lord and pass the basket!

- Seems like it will be soon but things are slipping around!

T; there is a big campaign to get people to buy dinars: if people insist on following the illusion, what more can we do?

Tommy: didn't you mention that stock market coming down in Feb?

T: Paul Krugman, American Economist, said he did not see how it could last until February; they did not

- Faction 3 does not give dates, or report it in that manner.
- She saw on the TV on Feb 6, 2014 all the markets go to Zero around the world
 - when Krugman said he did not think it could go past a year, it means a whole year of fraud and economic treason

MMG: it's an 8 year – Feb 6, 2015 is an 8-8 – 8 for money; 8 for divine gov't

T: there will be a measure of money in use for a time; does not know how long

- Just needs new rules
- The dark ones will be taken back to Dracos and tried as inter-galactic war criminals;
 - they laugh at the courts on the planet as they set them up, but they won't like Dracos!

MMG: just wait and see really exciting times!

T: this is a time to be very happy, in spite of the challenges we have been through

- Fantastic to live in these times.

BBSRADIO.COM

MOTHER SEKMET

Mother, Alcyone [M/A]

Greetings, Children of Ra!

- Indeed all of us are experiencing such auspicious times!
 - No accident that we have come to the right place, the right time as space/time: what all are experiencing is the great upliftment to the higher realms.
 - All our particles, trillions of cells that are universes within universes, hear the clarion call – what is happening: as within, so without
- What happens with these cells as we pass this electronic talking stick around the virtual campfire – and there were others fires before these ones: they go so far back, she has no words, except that she was here before the gods and goddesses were here!

- And we all made a conscious, divine choice to show up at this moment; no accident or a random act: this has already been seen.
 - all of what happens here is for the greater good of this planet
 - she & Alcyone come from our future which is her past.
 - She cannot say how we are doing this thing, that happens which announcements, and the freedom of our planet to join as the 33rd member of the Intergalactic Federation of Worlds.
- the acts that are being done in spite of appearances – and it IS appearances: all is moving onward and upward as Mr Carl has said: everything has been getting better and better all the time – same as the Beatles' song “It's Getting Better all the Time”
 - it is about what is happening inside the cells, what's happening in the space around us and her, too
 - it is the sound that is so loud with what is changing everything;
 - these issues at hand in the moment – know that these 12 are already sitting in council with the Admiral in Charge – things happen so fast in the realms now: one second you are here, the body goes through what it goes through in those concepts of energies that were taken out of their time space continuum to satisfy the needs of a small group of life forms – they have made their conscious choice to lead right to the very end of this story: respect them for their choice
 - they have made their choice which is not the one we have made: “Adios” is what she says
 - how they remove themselves from our view finder is their choice: yet they are into high drama!
 - it is a fiasco as they leave, they are so hungry for love and don't know how to ask, so they take themselves out in very violent, negative ways – an attention grabber –
 - they are playing the story of False Evidence Appearing Real and, energetically, etherically, it is food for them; it is in our best interest to cut them off from that FEAR story;

T: we are feeding them with our attention and our illusionary money that keeps us in the loop

Mo: To get to the point, pull the plug of the machine, shut off the illusion box and go outside

- when the power is off, you sit & listen to the sound of one hand clapping & chop wood, carry water
- all they are doing is major distractions – they have lost everything, and they have lost in a sense their right to exist simply because they made that conscious choice so she will help them out and take them to the Dark Rift.
 - There is no other way to talk about this issue: Second death: quite a drama they have chosen for themselves – there is always more than enough room in the pot to create more universes from the star stuff, the plasma that comes from the centre of the Milky Way Galaxy: it is an infinite womb space; it is about creation as well as what we understand as Kali Dirga, Pele – these primordial energies are what is in play here
 - As we play with primordial energies, be prepared to comprehend the full ramification of our actions – it affects not just one planet, but entire systems
 - that is why the small blue green speck in the vast sea of infinite joy & radiance across the Universe of Nebadon – it has the entire attention of the universe at this moment
- It is about the fact, as Lord Kryon of Magnetic Service has already said, they know that the people of earth are of a loving, divine, compassionate nature, and the ones who have done what they've done will face - as Anonymous said “we will find you”
- with the utmost grace, gratitude, dignity and respect, they will get their just due and it is about how she does this with her children.

T: our White Knights say “never you mind how it happens; we have it in hand”

- Someone made a statement today: they are just going to be gone.

Mo: They have made a conscious volition: energy goes where attention flows: cannot kill Ideas as this is what makes up universes. There are always good ideas, not so good ideas

- The nature of polarity means need a positive and a negative to make a magnet work; as we are in the place of anti Matter, it is like we are looking at the negative of a picture where it is the opposite of this polar universe

T: so the characters have an idea that is not written into the mind of God or the mind of Gaia – the Divine Plan says Mother, then they themselves cease to exist in the larger world

Mo: they have written them out of the Contract, the Divine Plan, so we move on to the next scene

- they have written themselves out of the script, the divine passion play
- we move on to the next story: 100,000 years of peace
- it is part of the mission here that as humanity awakens to its divine creation in all its beauty and forms, we get to see what was spoken about: the Cities of Light manifesting in our physicality
- It's a bit like Star Trek: "computer: hot fudge sundae" or I can take a walk in an arboretum and hang out with parrots or with the macah birds or the fruit loop birds in the jungles – all the magical birds

Mo: this planet is restoring itself to its pristine state long before there were any devices detonated in its atmosphere; in this moment, as we have stretched that rubber band so far, the tension has let go now & everything is . . .

T: it hurts when that band lets go!

Mo: for those who have chosen energy out of their time-space continuum, it is instant karma!

T: some people pursued the killing – a 3D item:

- the killing of Tamir Rice: it took lots of people to pursue this – finally got more footage released about the situation where the police were constraining the girl who was screaming that they had killed her baby brother and put her in handcuffs – they had a hard time constraining her & did not try to save the boy! The boy was still alive after 20-30 minutes: he died in hospital. They did not make one single effort to help him. This went on for 20 + minutes and called some folks
- Same as with Michael Brown

• The people didn't give up; they are turning it around, not giving up

Mo: This is where we say "Lord, make me an instrument of thy peace. Where there is such hatred, let me sow love!"

- these are the words of what changes this moment in this time/space continuum;
- As we are in the window of knowing what we are asking for, of how this people and the people become free, and we can begin to create the way of coming from the high heart. That is the place where as 5th dimensional beings at this time: this is the way to get into heaven: get into the high heart!
- As we have divine compassion, gratitude for all life – "ahimsa" a Sanskrit word meaning doing no harm to all living beings, all the beings in the grand hoop, circle of life – this is the place where we are going as we wish to live.
- Her wayward children have made their choices - honour those choices, as they honour ours. They are on their way out, and that is that!

• We have not been told the real story of who and what we are: gods, goddesses of the Most High!

- the Sasquatch people are coming forth and saying "In this new yuga, we can interact with you, come out of where we were and talk with you, and figure out how to instantaneously heal this planet – it only takes a few small groups

• As Heather Ann Harder said it would take 30 days to heal this planet: they shut her up trying to run for president because she knew what they could do when they were invited in.

• Now Mr 19.5 says – getting gray and white, getting people to come to the table - there is more than enough to go around; how come there are ones who go to bed hungry, and Mr and Mr Koch are continue to with little girls!

• This is why she comes, and comes with the bucket: This circle of life is sacred; it is this time now: the answers are: they are going to the Dark Rift – no more talk. It just is. The energies are pouring into this planet and we lift ourselves up with these energies, if we don't the energies will take us out if we don't choose to raise ourselves up.

Mo: FEAR ain't going to get you ascension; will only get you to another dimension!

- It is about this hour - there is more than enough food, more than enough love, more than enough money to cover all the billions of people on the planet – more than enough to go round. The life forms who have chosen their death cycle, honour them in their death cycle. She is on her way with the funeral barge and Anubis. .

- Greetings in the Light of the Most Radiant One! Kadoish, Kadoish, Kadoish 39 minutes.

R: has been sitting with Lord Metatron, discussing the next evolutionary leap of humanity

- They were at the Antares Arcturus Midway Station
- Has been working with the Tesseract, watching the patterns forming and as they form, the geometric shapes take on matter. Very beautiful
- He was watching the patterns
- the geometric patterns out of the cube have been repairing the DNA
- the rungs in the ladder are being refurbished!

2015, Jan 1 - Full Show: The Children’s Climate Crusade
January 1, 2015

The very agencies created to protect our environment have been hijacked by the polluting industries they were meant to regulate. It may just turn out that the judicial system, our children and their children will save us from ourselves.

The new legal framework for this crusade against global warming is called atmospheric trust litigation. It takes the fate of the Earth into the courts, arguing that the planet’s atmosphere – its air, water, land, plants and animals — are the responsibility of government, held in its trust to insure the survival of all generations to come. It’s the strategy being used by Bill’s recent guest, Kelsey Juliana, a co-plaintiff in a major lawsuit spearheaded by Our Children’s Trust, that could force the state of Oregon to take a more aggressive stance against the carbon emissions.

It’s the brainchild of Mary Christina Wood, a legal scholar who wrote the book, Nature’s Trust, tracing this public trust doctrine all the way back to ancient Rome.

Wood tells Bill: “If this nation relies on a stable climate system, and the very habitability of this nation and all of the liberties of young people and their survival interests are at stake, the courts need to force the agencies and the legislatures to simply do their job.”

INFORMATION RELATED TO THE NOTES

2015, Jan 1 The Public Trust; Mary Christina Wood, author of Nature's Trust: Environmental Law for a New Ecological Age

BILL MOYERS: Welcome. This is our final broadcast. But you haven't seen the last of us -- we'll continue to report and comment at our website, BillMoyers.com, I hope you'll join me there for a webchat later this month.

We end our broadcast series on an encouraging word from the emerging generation. Remember Kelsey Juliana from Eugene, Oregon? She's 18 years old, and co-plaintiff in a lawsuit spearheaded by the organization Our Children's Trust, which claims that Oregon is not doing all it can to slow down global warming and protect the future. It's one of several such suits around the country based on the doctrine of public trust, which goes back to ancient Rome. Here's an excerpt from that conversation:

KELSEY JULIANA on Moyers & Company: Public trust states that the government is a trustee to protect these natural resources -- air, water, land, you know, to protect them for this generation and for many generations down the line.

BILL MOYERS on Moyers & Company #337: The law professor who has developed this theory in its more modern garb, Mary Christina Wood, says it's because the government agencies that are supposed to protect our natural resources have been captured by corporate raiders and lobbyists, that these agencies treat these industries as their clients instead of the public. Do you think that's right?

KELSEY JULIANA on Moyers & Company #337: Unfortunately, we, you know, do have a lot of corruption, a lot of money, a lot of greed that influences most of our governmental decisions. So, I do think that's right. And that's why we're, you know, going to the courts, to hold the legislature accountable.

BILL MOYERS: Further hearings in the Oregon case are expected in a couple of months. The idea, which has come to be called atmospheric trust litigation, is catching on, thanks to this very influential book, "Nature's Trust," by the aforementioned legal scholar Mary Christina Wood. She teaches law at the University of Oregon and founded the Environmental and Natural Resources Law program there. Mary Christina Wood, welcome.

MARY CHRISTINA WOOD: Thank you.

BILL MOYERS: Let's talk about some of those cases that have been filed by Our Children's Trust. Exactly what is the purpose of those particular suits. What do they want?

MARY CHRISTINA WOOD: Every suit and every administrative petition filed in every state in the country and against the federal government asks for the same relief. And that is for the government, whether it's the state of Tennessee or the state of Oregon or the federal government to bring down carbon emissions in compliance with what scientists say is necessary to avert catastrophic climate change.

And so the remedy in the suits pending is for the courts to order a plan, simply order the legislatures and the agencies to do their job in figuring out how to lower carbon emissions. So the courts would not actually figure out how to do that. That's the other branch's job. It's just that they're not doing it. And they probably won't without pressure before we pass crucial tipping points.

BILL MOYERS: A plaintiff in one of the early suits, 16 years old at the time, sued the federal government, quote, "...for making decisions that threaten our right to a safe and healthy planet." Now, where does it say anywhere in law that the government serves as the trustee of the atmosphere and that it's violating its most compelling duties by failing, in the words of this young man, to protect the atmosphere from climate change? Where do you find that?

MARY CHRISTINA WOOD: You find that in case law, going back to the beginning years of this country. The Supreme Court, the US Supreme Court, has announced the public trust doctrine in multiple cases over the years. And again, it's in every state jurisprudence as well. And so this is not statutory law.

I think people are so accustomed to our statutory system, they always say, as you just did, where can we find it written down in a statute? Well, this is actually the foundation of all laws. Professor Gerald Torres has a wonderful quote in his writings, saying this is the slate upon which all constitutions and laws are written. And that is the approach most courts (in this country and other countries) take in describing the public trust

BILL MOYERS: It's clear that you consider the courts the alternative to the streets. That this is the way people, including your 16-year-olds and 17-year-olds who are filing these suits, can seek to redress their concerns about the climate and survival through the democratic process as opposed to taking to the streets.

MARY CHRISTINA WOOD: No. I would never say the two are mutually exclusive. The court is just one-- it's an important branch of government; it's the third branch of government. It's crucial to our checks and balances. And so of course you would think that the courts have a role to play.

But street democracy is so powerful. I don't know of any major movement that has succeeded without street democracy. When hundreds of thousands of people take to the streets, as they did in New York City, exercise their constitutional rights of free assembly; and then when you see, also, almost 100,000 people signing up and pledging to risk arrest if Keystone, the Keystone Pipeline, that would transport tar sands from Canada, those people are pledging to risk arrest if Obama or Congress approves the Keystone Pipeline.

When you see this kind of uprising, that only reinforces the more formal legal approaches that are put forth in the atmospheric trust litigation. The two go very much hand in hand because what is very important for judges is to sense the moral authority of the people. Judges have a finger on the pulse of the American people in a way that I think we don't really understand that well. Judges can, if they sense the need, move very rapidly and order swift injunctions to force the legislatures or agencies, or both, to create a carbon reduction plan. And as that awareness becomes more acute, as demonstrated in the streets, courts, I believe, will become more receptive to coming in and ordering the legislatures to do their job.

BILL MOYERS: What's the one thing you want the reader to take away from "Nature's Trust"?

MARY CHRISTINA WOOD: Most important thing is for citizens to understand that they are needed to promote environmental democracy at this crucial moment in time, that environmental law held a lot of promise but that it's not working, and that agencies have basically used it to allow almost unfettered destruction of our natural resources.

BILL MOYERS: What agencies are you talking about?

MARY CHRISTINA WOOD: Agencies that span the full realm of natural resources. So the US EPA, the Forest Service, the Bureau of Land Management, the Corps of Engineers, the US Fish and Wildlife Service, the National Marine Fisheries Service; you name it. There are dozens of agencies at the federal and state levels that control environmental resources. And they are supposed to represent the public interest and not corporations or moneyed interests in making those decisions. And we the public assume that the agencies are doing the right thing when they're implementing environmental laws. Whereas in fact, nothing could be further from the truth. Agencies have become politicized creatures that largely serve industry.

BILL MOYERS: You're talking about agencies at the federal government, but also at the state level.

MARY CHRISTINA WOOD: And the local level. Local, state, and federal level, across all natural resource regulatory areas. And I would never say that environmental law has done nothing. It has stopped a few things. Lead was taken out of gasoline, PCBs were banned, those things. But industry would like no regulation at all. It would like a free-for-all across all resource systems. So we are at a very dangerous situation in this country where the very life systems that support us are now imperiled and in jeopardy.

BILL MOYERS: What has happened to all those great laws passed in the 1970s? I mean, I was around for the first Earth Day in 1970. And then there came all of those promising laws out of Congress, which even President Nixon supported. There was so much optimism, so much promise.

MARY CHRISTINA WOOD: It's a huge disappointment. There was a lot of promise. The Americans thought they had solved the problem by getting these laws passed. What they didn't realize was that industries got inside the agencies through various means, through campaign contributions, through pressure on the system over and over again. And so one thing we have to keep in mind is we're nearing the end of our resources. And there are laws of nature that we have to comply with.

And those laws are supreme. And they determine whether we will survive on this planet. And they will determine the future conditions for our children. And so right now, our environmental laws are out of whack with the laws of nature. They are allowing destruction, whereas they should be structuring society to create a balance with the natural systems that support our lives.

BILL MOYERS: This paragraph leaped out at me, I'm quoting directly: "...it matters little what new laws emerge, for they will develop the same bureaucratic sinkholes that consumed the 1970s laws. Only a transformative approach can address sources of legal decay." What's the heart of this transformational approach?

MARY CHRISTINA WOOD: Well, the heart of the approach is the public trust doctrine. And it says that government is a trustee of the resources that support our public welfare and survival. And so a trust means that one entity or person manages a certain wealth, an endowment, so to speak, for the benefit of others. And in the case of the public trust, the beneficiaries are the present and future generations of citizens. So it is a statement of, in essence, public property rights that have been known since Roman times.

In fact, this was articulated by the Chief Justice of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court in a landmark public trust decision last year. And the decision basically overturned a statute that the Pennsylvania Legislature had passed to promote fracking. And the Chief Justice of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, Chief Justice Castille, said this violates the public trust. And he began his opinion by saying that citizens hold inalienable environmental rights to assure the habitability of their communities.

And that these are ensconced in the social contract that citizens make with government. They cannot be alienated. They are inherent and reserved. So they are of a constitutional nature. And the point of the public trust is that the citizens hold these constitutional rights in an enduring natural endowment that is supposed to support all future generations of citizens in this country. It is so basic to democracy; in fact, the late Joseph Sax said the trust distinguishes a society of citizens from serfs.

BILL MOYERS: Well, that will strike some people as socialist.

MARY CHRISTINA WOOD: It inures in democracy. Now, if they believe that is socialism, then we have quite a conversation ahead, because this has been a part of our legal system since the very earliest years of our country. The Supreme Court of the United States in a landmark case called Illinois Central Railroad in 1892 said that the Illinois Legislature couldn't just give away the shoreline of Chicago, the shoreline along Lake Michigan, to a private railroad company, because the citizens needed that shoreline for fishing and navigation and commerce. This is really nothing new. It's certainly not socialism. It is the heart of popular sovereignty to expect that the citizens have enduring rights to the resources that support their very survival.

BILL MOYERS: This is a political question. I mean, it's a question that traditionally legislators, elected by voters, would resolve, but you are taking it to court.

MARY CHRISTINA WOOD: Well, it is political question for the legislatures to respond to. The fact is they're not. And if this nation relies on a stable climate system, and the very habitability of this nation and all of the liberties of young people and their survival interests are at stake the courts need to force the agencies and the legislatures to simply do their job.

BILL MOYERS: But haven't most of the lower courts dismissed these suits on procedural grounds? That dealing with climate is, quote, indeed a "political question" that the courts must avoid.

MARY CHRISTINA WOOD: Well, it's interesting. As the-- this is very new litigation. These cases were all filed by the group Our Children's Trust in 2011. And so the initial ones really set some important principles in place. Number one, the courts seemed to realize that the public trust is an area of law that the legislatures and agencies must abide by. That the young people of this country have public trust rights. They're recognizing air and atmosphere, most of them, as a public trust resource, either implicitly or explicitly. They're increasingly recognizing the urgency of climate change. And the latest cases have even dismissed the political question doctrine as a defense.

They've been saying, you do have to deal with this. It's not-- this is a public trust right. It's not just a matter for the other branches of government. You have to figure out the nature of the right and give relief if you find there is a justiciable right there. And as the petitions get denied, which they will by the administrative agencies, we all know that, that will be no surprise, the youth and their lawyers are then preparing judicial challenges in those states. And so really, the message for judges out there that get these cases, I think, is this is not an environmental case.

BILL MOYERS: Not an environmental case.

MARY CHRISTINA WOOD: No.

BILL MOYERS: What is it?

MARY CHRISTINA WOOD: Climate is not just an environmental issue. This is a civilizational issue. This is the biggest case that courts will get in terms of the potential harm in front of them, the population affected by that harm, and in terms of the urgency. Climate is mind-blowing. It can't be categorized any longer as an environmental issue.

BILL MOYERS: And yet, we are about to have a Congress controlled by a party, the Republican Party, that boasts of denying climate change brought on by human behavior. Do you expect anything positive coming out of the political process to reinforce your efforts over the next few years?

MARY CHRISTINA WOOD: I absolutely do. But not at the federal congressional level. I do at the local level. And so the federal Congress has essentially been purchased through millions and millions of dollars of campaign contributions. The whole purpose of the public trust is to prevent one branch of government from precisely that type of corruption.

It holds that these legislators are trustees with constitutional obligations to the citizens. So just to put it out there, the public trust is designed for precisely the situation we have today. Now, whether or not I expect political reinforcement, I would say absolutely at the local level. These cases are finding reinforcement at the local level. In fact, in Eugene, Oregon, Our Children's Trust organized a group of youth and they went before city council, month after month after month, and testified, asking the city council to really take action on climate and to make Eugene, Oregon a carbon-neutral place.

And after month after month after month, when the city councilors looked those children in the eyes and saw what I describe as just the moral authority of these youth, they passed the most aggressive climate ordinance in the country. And I think that is the power of the youth. The youth have to now step up, come before their legislators, pack the courtrooms in these atmospheric trust cases, meet with the agency people.

The youth have to come forward because they have no money. They have no voting rights. But they have got something that no one else has, and that is the moral authority. That is the future. And the obligations we naturally feel towards our own children, towards children we love, they all come to the surface when we can-- when we actually speak to youth about the future they face.

BILL MOYERS: Excuse me for being tedious on this, but as you probably know, there is so much pressure now on many state Supreme Courts from judicial elections that are deeply influenced, since Citizens United in particular, with huge rivers of money overflowing in every election.

MARY CHRISTINA WOOD: Well, so what you're doing is presenting a political reality. And you're absolutely right. There's no arguing with that at all. But I'm a lawyer. The task ahead is to figure out where the pressure points may lie in the legal system that we have today. It would be great if we had democracy thriving. We would not have a climate problem if that were the case. And so when you structure a legal response to a problem as grave as climate change, you don't have false hope that a branch that is co-opted will act. You have some hope that some courts in some states that are less politicized will act and that those states will set a precedent or a domino effect and certainly will change the economic equation in those states.

It's not perfect. Again, we have the structure we have. We have only three branches. We go back to fifth grade civics and we find we have to work with the constitutional structure here. And so you just try to find the mechanisms to make progress and to use litigation also as a tool for refining the issue in the Americans' minds. Because the court of public opinion is ever so important to this climate crisis right now.

BILL MOYERS: So as this old year ends and the new year begins, you're not the pessimist I thought you might be, faced against the legal and administrative and executive system that you're up against.

MARY CHRISTINA WOOD: If we love our children and nieces and nephews and grandchildren, we cannot be pessimistic. We have to do everything possible at this moment in time. And we have to forge ahead with courage and optimism. And ultimately, we have to be guided by the moral principles that were responsible for the founding of this nation. So no, I'm not a pessimist.

BILL MOYERS: The book is "Nature's Trust: Environmental Law for a New Ecological Age". Mary Christina Wood, thank you very much for being with me.

MARY CHRISTINA WOOD: Thank you so much.

BILL MOYERS: Mary Christina Wood reminds us that democracy, too is a public trust – a reciprocal agreement between generations to keep it in good repair and pass it along. Our country's DNA carries an inherent promise for every citizen of an equal opportunity at life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. Our history resonates with the hallowed idea – hallowed by blood – of government of, by, and for the people. Our great progressive struggles have been waged to make sure ordinary citizens, and not just the rich and privileged, share in the benefits of a free society. In the words of Louis Brandeis, one of the greatest of our Supreme Court justices, "We may have democracy, or we may have wealth concentrated in the hands of a few, but we can't have both."

Yet look at just a few recent headlines: this one from "The New York Times": "U.S. Wealth Gap Is Widest in Decades". From the website Alternet: "Just 40 Americans Own As Much Wealth As Half the United States." From Slate.com: "The Great Wealth Meltdown: Middle-Class Families Are Worth Less Today Than in 1969." And from "The Economist": "Wealth without workers, workers without wealth," pointing to the reality that "for all but an elite few, work no longer guarantees a rising income."

So as the next generation steps forward, I am tempted to think that the only thing my generation can say to them is: we're sorry. Sorry for the mess you're inheriting. Sorry we broke the trust. But I know in my heart that's not what they ask or expect. So instead I recommend to them the example of Senator Robert La Follette of Wisconsin, another of my heroes from the past. He battled the excesses of the first Gilded Age a century ago so boldly and proudly that he went down in history as "Fighting Bob." He told us, "...democracy is a life; and involves continual struggle." I keep asking myself, what if that struggle is the palpable reality without which this world would be truly barren?

So to this new generation I say: over to you, welcome to the fight.

And to all of you who have been loyal to these broadcasts, and to my colleagues who produced them and our funders who kept on giving despite my foibles and flaws, I say: thank you. This series ends, but not our website -- BillMoyers.com. I'll see you there, and I'll see you around.
