The enormous growth in the digital resources within the libraries and on the Web in the recent past has necessitated that libraries relocate at this growing paradigm. It is the need of the hour that LIS professionals implement emerging digital tools and technologies in libraries. They need to be a part of the digital universe in order to explore infinite possibilities for libraries. The mushrooming of the information and communication technologies to manage content and its delivery to users has been the concern of DELNET while organising the National Conventions on Knowledge, Library and Information Networking (NACLIN) since 1998. To manage smooth transition in libraries from their hybrid operations to fully automated applications, NACLIN 2017 is specially going to look into the steps libraries need to take in terms of content, services, technology and staff management, besides many other issues. These changes have to be in tune with the national programmes and priorities, and global obligations and technology trends. In these changing scenarios, the librarians have to take a proactive approach and work for this tectonic change that the information deluge and ICT have evolved. The library professionals that are working in traditional libraries can no longer remain insulated from the challenges which need to be addressed by them. They have to be collaborating in bridging the digital divide that exists in society in general and library users in particular. Libraries have to offer focused services to their users on a growing number of issues that the digital universe is bringing forth. It is with this concern that the National Convention on Knowledge, Library and Information Networking (NACLIN 2017) is being organised by DELNET at New Delhi from November 28-30, 2017.

The 20th National Convention on Knowledge, Library and Information Networking (NACLIN 2017) being organised from November 28-30, 2017 will discuss a large number of latest issues under the theme “A Digital Universe of Infinite Possibilities for Libraries.” The National Convention is scheduled for three days. PLACES OF TOURIST ATTRACTION IN NEW DELHI

Red Fort: In 1638, the Mughal Emperor Shah Jahan moved the capital of his empire from Agra to a newly constructed city in Delhi that he called Shahjahanabad. Along with the construction of this new city, he laid the foundations of his palace, the Red Fort or Lal Qila. This massive walled citadel with red sandstone walls took complete.

nearly a decade to

Qutab Minar is a soaring, 73 m-high tower of victory, built in 1193 by Qutab-ud-din Aibak immediately after the defeat of Delhi's last Hindu kingdom. The tower has five distinct storeys, each marked by a projecting balcony and tapers from a 15 m diameter at the base to just 2.5 m at the top. The first three storeys are made of red sandstone; the fourth and fifth storeys are of marble and sandstone. At the foot of the tower is the Quwwat-ul-Islam Mosque, the first mosque to be built in India.

Swaminarayan Akshardham in New Delhi epitomizes 10,000 years of Indian culture in all its breathtaking grandeur, beauty, wisdom and bliss. It brilliantly showcases the essence of India's ancient architecture, traditions and timeless spiritual messages. The Akshardham experience is an enlightening journey through India's glorious art, values and contributions for the progress, happiness and harmony of mankind.

Lotus Temple: East of Nehru place, this temple is built in the shape of a lotus flower and is the last of seven Major Bahai's temples built around the world. Completed in 1986 it is set among the lush green landscaped gardens.

The structure is made up of pure white marble.

The architect Furiburz Sabha chose the lotus as the symbol common to Hinduism, Buddhism, Bhai Temple Jainism and Islam. Adherents of any faith are free to visit the temple and pray or meditate.

Humayun's Tomb

Humayun's Tomb was built in 1565 A.D., nine years after the death of Humayun, by his senior widow Bega Begam. Inside the walled enclosure the most notable features are the garden squares (chaharbagh) with pathways water channels, centrally located well proportional mausoleum topped by double dome.

India Gate: At the centre of New Delhi stands the 42 m high India Gate, an "Arc-de-Triomphe" like archway in the middle of a crossroad. Almost similar to its French counterpart, it commemorates the 70,000 Indian soldiers who lost their lives fighting for the British Army during the World War I. The memorial bears the names of more than 13,516 British and Indian soldiers killed in the Northwestern Frontier in the Afghan war of 1919.

Purana Quila: One does not have to go far to see the old fort or Purana Quila standing stoically amidst wild greenery. Built on the site of the most ancient of the numerous cities of Delhi, Indraprastha, Purana Quila is roughly rectangular in shape having a circuit of nearly two kilometers.

The thick ramparts crowned by merlons have three gateways provided with bastions on either side. It was surrounded by a wide moat, connected to river Yamuna, which used to flow on the east of the fort. The northern gate way, called the Talaqui darwaza or the forbidden gateway, combines the typically Islamic pointed arch with Hindu Chhatris and brackets; whereas the southern gateway called the Purana Quila.

Jantar Mantar (Yantra - instruments, mantra - formulae) was constructed in 1724. Maharaja Jai Singh of Jaipur who built this observatory went on to build other observatories in Ujjain, Varanasi and Mathura. Jai Singh had found the existing astronomical instruments too small to take correct measurements and so he built these larger and more accurate instruments.

Lodhi Garden: Lodhi Garden is dotted with monuments of Sayyid and Lodhi Periods, which include tombs, mosques and bridges.

Lodhi Tomb, the tombs of Muhammad Shah and Sikandar Lodhi are the good examples of octagonal tombs. Shish and Bara Gumbad are square tombs with imposing dome, turrets on corners and facades giving false impression of being double storeyed.
