WASHINGTON, August 15, 2012 -- /INSSAwire/ -- The International NGO Safety and Security Association (INSSA) announced today its Chair, Dominic Crowley was named one of Security Magazine's "Most Influential People in Security 2012"

Each year, Security magazine honors top security executives who positively impact the security industry, their organization, their colleagues and their peers. They change the security landscape for the better. They are nominated by their colleagues and associates, and they are chosen based upon their leadership qualities and the overall positive impact that their security projects, programs or departments have on their shareholders, organizations, colleagues and general public. This year's Most Influential is organized by eight categories: Corporate Security Practitioners; Cities, Counties, States Security; NGO Security; Information Technology/Cyber Security; Government Security; Security Organizations; Think Tanks/Universities and Defense Sector Security.

Dominic Crowley has worked in the aid sector for more than 20 years. He is the Founding Charter Chairman of the Board of Directors for the International NGO Safety and Security Association (INSSA). INSSA plays a significant role in providing security and safety guidance to the humanitarian aid and development community around the world. INSSA is committed to improving the quality and effectiveness of safety and security for humanitarian relief and development assistance workers operating in complex and dangerous environments around the world.

He currently works for Concern Worldwide in Dublin, Ireland and has been the Head of Concern's Emergency Unit for the last 10 years. Prior to taking up this position, he worked for Save the Children UK in Somalia, Liberia, south Sudan and the Rwandan refugee program in Tanzania. In his current role, he is responsible for establishing and ensuring the maintenance of effective security management processes in all of Concern's countries of operation through the development of policy, the articulation of good practice, the development and delivery of a variety of security-related training courses, and conducting field security audits and assessments to ensure that country program security management practice is commensurate with and adaptable to changing levels of threat.
