Kay Wilson Speaks at Jewish Community Center

Messianic Jewish tour guide and survivor of a murder attempt in Jerusalem, Kay Wilson, will be speaking at the Jewish Community Center located at 5801 W 115th St., Overland Park, Kansas, on Thursday, Aug. 14, at 7 p.m.

Born in London, Wilson came to Israel for the first time in the 1980s and made Aliya in 1991, during the First Gulf War. Two days after she arrived, the Scuds started falling, but it didn't deter her from staying.

After working as a part-time illustrator and cartoonist, as a jazz pianist with regular gigs in Tel Aviv and at a variety of other jobs, Wilson decided to become a tour guide in 2006.

She guides in both Hebrew and English but has found her niche guiding English-speaking Christians, specializing in the Second Temple Period and the Jewish roots of Christianity.

It was through her guide work that Wilson met Kristine Luken. They were both participants on a study tour this past summer that explored Jewish life and the Holocaust in Poland. Luken wanted to learn more about Judaism, while Wilson wanted to understand more about how Christians understand and experience the Holocaust. They became fast friends and kept in touch.

Luken arrived two days before the attack on Dec. 16. On Saturday afternoon, Dec. 18, 2010, the friends were hiking in the Mata forest, near the town of Beit Shemesh, west of Jerusalem. They noticed two Arab men, Aiad Fatafa and Kifah Ghanimat, approaching them and were suspicious of their intentions. The men then attacked them with a long, serrated knife. The women attempted to fight back. Wilson managing to stab an attacker with a pocketknife before they were subdued. The men stole their money and removed Wilson's Star of David necklace.

Despite multiple stab wounds, Wilson survived the attack. Luken's body was later found by Israeli police, bound and stabbed to death. The Palestinian terror cell that perpetrated the attack were later arrested.

I heard her tonight. She was warm, funny, redemptive in terms of seeing the hand of G-d in all. Shmuel
