

What is Transition?

A community-led response to the challenges of climate change, economic hardship and shrinking supplies of cheap energy.

We believe that by pulling together we can make our community more resilient to these challenges. By acting locally - developing local skills, networks and resources - our future will be more fulfilling and enriching, and our lives will be more connected to each other and to the Earth that we depend on.

Transition Town groups in over a thousand towns and cities across the world are finding their own solutions through projects in food, transport, energy, housing, education, waste, arts and local currencies.

Transition is about making a positive difference locally, having fun, getting to know our neighbours, making new friends, sharing skills and ideas to build a stronger community that is better prepared for the future.

www.transitionwillesden.org.uk

What are we doing locally?

We hold public meetings - film screenings, talks (foraging, food-growing), and workshops (nettle pesto, fermented foods, chutney, jam and bread-making). A core group meets to organise these and other activities.

We have a fruit harvesting group, Willesden Fruit Harvesters, that picks unwanted fruit from local gardens to share with the community.

We are looking to set up a community food-growing and wild flower planting space.

Join us

Everyone is welcome to get involved. You may want to join one of our groups, or have your own ideas for a working group or project. You may have skills you'd like to share or learn. Join our mailing list to hear about our activities and other local news, or just come along to one of our events.

Please get in touch to find out more:

Email transitionwillesden@gmail.com

Website www.transitionwillesden.org.uk

More on Transition see:

