

Leading a Living Organisation

The authors draw insightful parallels between biological organisms and the new breed of organisations that have achieved dramatic success in the past decade. Their perspective provides a guide to adapting existing organisations and creating new ones for competitive success.