

Just a little info about a former client of mine; Dr. John W. Siebert

I became acquainted with Dr. Siebert during the fall of 2006; he was quite charming, and extremely polite. He spoke in a soft voice that made you feel comfortable being around him. He wanted to talk to me, probably believing that he could pick me up. Little did he know that I was working my way through college as a waitress and as I like to call it a personal assistant. I'm very choosy about new clients. He met my criteria so we started a business relationship; a large amount of my clients are New York doctors. After work we went back to his apartment at 245 E 40th St, apt 29b. That night it didn't take much effort on my part, I quickly gave him a nickname, Dr. Quick Draw, he was lucky if he lasted more than two or three minutes, and suffered an erection problem. I suggested the little blue pill and a little topical anesthetic a half hour before our next appointment; who is the doctor here? Our next session was quite different, he could last a half hour and now he thought he was god's gift to women, wanting to take our sex to another level; he wanted me to dress like a school girl and try every position known to man! This is not uncommon with married men; I did it and charged accordingly for his pleasure.

He started having money problems in the spring of 2007, I usually don't extend credit to customers, but felt he was a doctor and eventually he would pay, and he did. Next time I heard from him was September 2008, telling me he was lonely. I went to his apartment had a bite to eat, conversation and sex. He told me he was a little short on cash when it came time to pay; he said he would pay me at our next session. I was very busy and didn't have contact with him for a few weeks. He finally called wanting to book another session. I asked about my money; he offered to do breast surgery at no cost in exchange for my services. I didn't want or need surgery; I like my "B" cup just fine. I wanted the money. He said the holidays were upon us and he was having a hard time making ends meet due to personal problems. He reminded me that he always paid me in the past. Like a fool, I gave in and went to his apartment, had sex and left with a promise of payment after the holidays.

January and February went by, no payment. He called in March, booked a session and paid for all three. He booked two more sessions in April on credit. The next time I heard from him was October 2009, he wanted to schedule another session. I reminded him he still owed me for the last two; he said he would pay me in full right after he came back from Seattle. I told him I didn't trust him anymore because it has been six months of him not answering my calls. He became a little obstinate with me, that's when I told him I was going to cut my losses and he should find someone else to fuck.

It pissed me off that this asshole doctor owed me $1,000 for our last two sessions for six months, refused to answer my calls and wanted another session on credit.

Sorry, I need to keep my full identity hidden for business and personal reasons. I never needed anyone to strong arm for me, as I said I'm very choosy picking clients. I don't have anyway of collecting the money owed without major problems and decided it was not worth the trouble. If he had paid, I would have kept our relationship a secret. I saw his name all over the internet and read about his sexual encounters; I thought what a perfect place to tell my story. Sorry "John" you should have paid when you got laid!

Go to Google search – type Dr John W Siebert Smoking Hot Waitress -- This should bring you to the search result listed below. You will notice that Dr Marco Garcia is the highest tip Daddy; Dr John W. Siebert is also a Tip Daddy, that's how I met him. Several doctors advertise on this site because a lot of the girls want breast surgery, and some barter for surgical services.

Sorry John,

I finished school and will be leaving for home; changing careers. Hopefully you will learn to pay for services rendered. Just a little goodbye note; you really suck in bed, keep your tongue in your mouth, you don't know how to kiss, and never perform oral sex on a working girl, they don't get turned on, its just business.

Love and kisses, "Your Little School Girl"
