HARD NEWS

T: story about Italy – earthquake: 250 dead now, not sure how many under the debris

- Area is centuries old – the towns, the homes – complete devastation
- Two visitors to the area helped a man get free so he wouldn't suffocate; helped his girl friend
- Count expected to go higher – whole mountains shifted
- In Cuba, 52 year old war in Colombia and FARC – an agreement was signed – this is huge!!!
 - the drama going on in Colombia and South America has been going on for quite a while – England was behind the selling of arms in this story
- Greg Palast: 2016-08-24 The GOP's Stealth War Against Voters [SEE BELOW]
 - Trump was talking of one voter voting many times & registering all over the place – that is not what happened
 - The rigging is quite different than that!
 - The Republicans need to win – and here is why - In 2006, the Bush Clinton Crime Family did 9/11; Bush Jr announced that, for all those involved - Britain – MI 5, MI6; Saudi Arabia, Israel – the Moussad; The Vatican - there would be immunity from being indicted – no one was to talk about it
 - the military went around and forced everyone in the media, Hollywood, politics to sign a non-disclosure: they'd be shot if they mentioned anything about 911 being an inside job
 - The story about this came out on an RT program called The Truth Seeker. This article was taken down until August 14 of this year: now RT returned it and is reporting that Putin will release satellite images that show both towers were destroyed by an implosion
 - he could do it on Sept 11 OR sooner! TRUTH MUST BE MADE KNOWN & THOSE INVOLVED INDICTED as the first step to stop the genocidal evil which has overtaken the planet; over 80,000 people were killed in the 2 towers – ie, lied about how many really died
 - 911 truth will come out: when the rep for Architects and Engineers for 911 was asked who did it, he said the question was who DIDN'T do it was the 19 hi hackers
 - the real planes were flown across the Canadian border: the people are safe and sound, and in witness protection protections
 - the Canadian who went to visit his homeland was intercepted at La Guardia airport and hijacked and tortured for 9 months; he had taken some film footage with a special underground camera; it showed that the 2 planes were going across the Cdn border at the same time they were supposed to be hitting the buildings

- A documentary called "911 Second Edition" by Ben Stewart showed the footage of the towers going down – could see star ships alongside beaming people up into the crafts; also saw pterodactyls – flying reptiles – they were literally human looking beings who are not human and shape shifted into those forms flew down and picked up people from the streets & took them away

[SEE BELOW FOR INFO]

- What is happening with the so-called "voting fraud" is happening because, if they do not get in as republicans and take over the whole senate & congress in Nov, they know they will be exposed for doing 911; they have only made it to the 10 year date – want to keep it suppressed for ever.

Reading: Greg Palast: Idea is to disenfranchise voters [SEE BELOW]

- the cross check list proportionately attacks democrats, african americans, latinos, etc
- $73Million of tax payer money was spent to find this kind of fraud, and found nothing
- Palast describes the cross check process and where its weaknesses are

R: spoke to Rana Mu today

- Nibiru is moving into the inner part of the solar system; crossing the rings of Saturn and approaching Jupiter; this is causing some of the disruption on the planet – like in Myanmar and Italy: the electrical magnetic frequencies bounce & affect different parts of the planet
- all of the energies raise frequencies higher and higher
- It's not just Nibiru moving – there are also planet-sized ships like the blue avians and there are others – the 13 families know about this; are freaked out

R: many stories are coming in

- Leslie Marshall show: a lady was sitting in for Leslie
- Guest was a woman from Afghanistan with a story of 5 US soldiers rescued by a sasquatch with blue and red hair who took them into a cave
 - The Sasquatch signalled a craft from Andromeda; the soldiers did not want to remain on earth any more, so they were taken to Andromeda! Goes well beyond dissertation!

- LM NADA YESTERDAY; everything is about keeping people as distracted as possible – fake news with just a touch of reality

Angelsu: what about all the storms happening now and coming up – multiples in both Atlantic and Pacific – is this another distraction or what?

T: there are increased frequencies in the planet – 6% precipitation

- has to do with the carbon in the atmosphere: the 13 families are playing with climate change – if we could get off fossil fuels today, earth could breathe again!
- If we did [stop using fossil fuels], the Atlantean grid is fully on line and would kick in immediately as it is fully active
- the process we are engaged with is the process that does not violate free will choice
 - all the ones involved need to be arrested: they've already been tried and indicted for what they have done

AS: the numerology for today is a 6: in service to humanity either receive it or give it

7: St Germain – blaze the Violet Fire!!! What do they suggest that we all focus on for the coming week?

R: Mercury about to go retro as of Sept 1st, and the new moon/solar eclipse is a hum-dinger!

- Aluna Joy has a great writing about frequency shifting & things calming down
[SEE BELOW]
- The biggest story being pumped right now is the fear; neither of the 2 candidates have anything to offer the planet except more of the same!
 - Bernie did an excellent job last night yet he has some problems within his own group

AS: As our intent for the next week, we need to hold the calm and for divine intervention

T: another astrology chart by Carl Boudreau – to be uploaded to 2013 Rainbow Roundtable

- O: children – son is 14, Daughter is 18 & she hasn't spoken to him in 2 mosquitoes
- they don't live with him; there is a lot of negative energy between him and ex; O will help him understand why he's stuck: they are both personalizing every thing that is said
 - once they have brought in children, the contract is done & things go bad, yet we are taught that divorce etc are not part of it – on a spiritual level, the contract is done

- O: to move on, start responding, not reacting; start detaching and not personalizing; also trust that whatever relationship you have with the children will last
- detach with love – you can love them without liking them – respond, not react

Ca: he loves and blesses her as the mother of the children – says that prayer with her in mind

O: love and bless you too!

COR: not as the mother of your children but just as a person who's giving trouble right nowadays she's still kind of stuck at that point – disappointed

- if you can get into anything creative – while you do that, lots of wonderful insights, intuitive insights will come to you while the mind is busy; it opens up a channel for intuitive

O: you are in a good place; you just don't know it

Ca: feels it sometimes - what about transportation – car is made up of band aids and plastic bands

O: manifest a new one!

COR: does he work with energy meditation? write her at ascensiointimes@gmail.com

O: you ARE going to survive!!!

O: get up every morning; bless yourself; be grateful for your life; thank the car for being there!

CallerMN: you've kind of answered my question: about finance - cars break down, bills piling up

- just when they think they have enough for the family, something else happens

COR: their abundance consciousness is limited – have a survival consciousness: money only comes in for necessities; came from the family in the past, as it has with many families

- has several ways to deal with it: sit down and write an affirmation: our family always has enough money for everything, no matter what – leave space on right hand side of the paper and your subconsciousness will probably say "what? " "you're kidding me!" You might have to write that affirmation 15 – 20 times until your subconscious says "OK, I believe you"

- There's a ton of old programming in there: we're just ordinary, we don't need a lot of money – yet in these days, we need more than a little bit to get along

- in these days, to survive we have to do well – lightworkers are being put into the position

- 8-10 things you are grateful for EVERY DAY and say thank you

- Money doesn't like to hang out with people who say they don't have anything because it sounds like you're blaming it!

- e-mail her at ascensiointimes.com to get some of the free gifts

- just keep believing and making the affirmations

T: Jupiter has been missing in the field of our astrology – this will change just before 9/11 –

- things will not stop but will keep on expanding for a couple of years: Jupiter is total kindness, prosperity, love – all of it! So what we are going through right now is just a test – the tools we are getting are just spendiforous! Just keep practicing with them!!!

AS: Contact info; closing words

Omena: www.omena776.com Phone: 860-871-6076 e-mail: omenacentre777@gmail.com

- love yourself enough to let someone else love you

COR: ascensiointimes@gmail.com; www.carolynceanryan.com

the e-book coming out is about abundance

- her words: we came here to expand our energies and to break up the paradigm about how limited we are in energy, resources

- we are recapturing all our 5th dimensional abilities – we can create all kinds of things: travel, dissolving all debt

- Keep aware of how expansive life is

Closing: so encouraged by the work they are doing

- AS asks Omena, while she is in Sedona, to cast a stone over an abyss and call in the energies for the stargates and all those connected with it; and change the energy for us

- yes, shift the energies to a higher vibration and a gentler integration of it: ease, effortless, fun result

O: and we can command it!

2016-08-24 The GOP's Stealth War Against Voters

<http://www.rollingstone.com/politics/features/the-gops-stealth-war-against-voters-w435890>

Will an anti-voter-fraud program designed by one of Trump's advisers deny tens of thousands their right to vote in November?

The Crosscheck program is a response to the imaginary menace of mass voter fraud. Mark Makela/Reuters

By Greg Palast

1 day ago

When Donald Trump claimed, "the election's going to be rigged," he wasn't entirely wrong. But the threat was not, as Trump warned, from Americans committing the crime of "voting many, many times." What's far more likely to undermine democracy in November is the culmination of a decade-long Republican effort to disenfranchise voters under the guise of battling voter fraud. The latest tool: Election officials in more than two dozen states have compiled lists of citizens whom they allege could be registered in more than one state – thus potentially able to cast multiple ballots – and eligible to be purged from the voter rolls.

The data is processed through a system called the Interstate Voter Registration Crosscheck Program, which is being promoted by a powerful Republican operative, and its lists of potential duplicate voters are kept confidential. But Rolling Stone obtained a portion of the list and the names of 1 million targeted voters. According to our analysis, the Crosscheck list disproportionately threatens solid Democratic constituencies: young, black, Hispanic and Asian-American voters – with some of the biggest possible purges underway in Ohio and North Carolina, two crucial swing states with tight Senate races.

America will vote for president in a country where it's easier to buy a gun than vote in many states

Like all weapons of vote suppression, Crosscheck is a response to the imaginary menace of mass voter fraud. In the mid-2000s, after the Florida-recount debacle, the Bush administration launched a five-year investigation into the allegedly rampant crime but found scant evidence of wrongdoing. Still, the GOP has perpetuated the myth in every national election since. Recently, North Carolina Board of Elections chief Kim Strach testified to her legislature that 35,750 voters are "registered in North Carolina and another state and voted in both in the 2012 general election." Yet despite hiring an ex-FBI agent to lead the hunt, the state has charged exactly zero double voters from the Crosscheck list. Nevertheless, tens of thousands face the loss of their ability to vote – all for the sake of preventing a crime that rarely happens. So far, Crosscheck has tagged an astonishing 7.2 million suspects, yet we found no more than four perpetrators who have been charged with double voting or deliberate double registration.

On its surface, Crosscheck seems quite reasonable. Twenty-eight participating states share their voter lists and, in the name of dispassionate, race-blind Big Data, seek to ensure the rolls are up to date. To make sure the system finds suspect voters, Crosscheck supposedly matches first, middle and last name, plus birth date, and provides the last four digits of a Social Security number for additional verification.

In reality, however, there have been signs that the program doesn't operate as advertised. Some states have dropped out of Crosscheck, citing problems with its methodology, as Oregon's secretary of state recently explained: "We left [Crosscheck] because the data we received was unreliable."

In our effort to report on the program, we contacted every state for their Crosscheck list. But because voting twice is a felony, state after state told us their lists of suspects were part of a criminal investigation and, as such, confidential. Then we got a break. A clerk in Virginia sent us its Crosscheck list of suspects, which a letter from the state later said was done "in error."

The Virginia list was a revelation. In all, 342,556 names were listed as apparently registered to vote in both Virginia and another state as of January 2014. Thirteen percent of the people on the Crosscheck list, already flagged as inactive voters, were almost immediately removed, meaning a stunning 41,637 names were "canceled" from voter rolls, most of them just before Election Day.

We were able to obtain more lists – Georgia and Washington state, the total number of voters adding up to more than 1 million matches – and Crosscheck's results seemed at best deeply flawed. We found that one-fourth of the names on the list actually lacked a middle-name match. The system can also mistakenly identify fathers and sons as the same voter, ignoring designations of Jr. and Sr. A whole lot of people named "James Brown" are suspected of voting or registering twice, 357 of them in Georgia alone. But according to Crosscheck, James Willie Brown is supposed to be the same voter as James Arthur Brown. James Clifford Brown is allegedly the same voter as James Lynn Brown.

And those promised birth dates and Social Security numbers? The Crosscheck instruction manual says that "Social Security numbers are included for verification; the numbers might or might not match" – which leaves a crucial step in the identification process up to the states. Social Security numbers weren't even included in the state lists we obtained.

We had Mark Swedlund, a database expert whose clients include eBay and American Express, look at the data from Georgia and Virginia, and he was shocked by Crosscheck's "childish methodology." He added, "God forbid your name is Garcia, of which there are 858,000 in the U.S., and your first name is Joseph or Jose. You're probably suspected of voting in 27 states."

Swedlund's statistical analysis found that African-American, Latino and Asian names predominate, a simple result of the Crosscheck matching process, which spews out little more than a bunch of common names. No surprise: The U.S. Census data shows that minorities are overrepresented in 85 of 100 of the most common last names. If your name is Washington, there's an 89 percent chance you're African-American. If your last name is Hernandez, there's a 94 percent chance you're Hispanic. If your name is Kim, there's a 95 percent chance you're Asian.

The Crosscheck program, started by Kris Kobach, has spread to over two dozen states, tagging more than 7 million voters as possibly suspect. Christopher Smith/Washington Post/Getty

This inherent bias results in an astonishing one in six Hispanics, one in seven Asian-Americans and one in nine African-Americans in Crosscheck states landing on the list. Was the program designed to target voters of color? "I'm a data guy," Swedlund says. "I can't tell you what the intent was. I can only tell you what the outcome is. And the outcome is discriminatory against minorities."

Every voter that the state marks as a legitimate match receives a postcard that is colorless and covered with minuscule text. The voter must verify his or her address and mail it back to their secretary of state. Fail to return the postcard and the process of taking your name off the voter rolls begins.

This postcard game amplifies Crosscheck's built-in racial bias. According to the Census Bureau, white voters are 21 percent more likely than blacks or Hispanics to respond to their official requests; homeowners are 32 percent more likely to respond than renters; and the young are 74 percent less likely than the old to respond. Those on the move – students and the poor, who often shift apartments while hunting for work – will likely not get the mail in the first place.

At this point, there's no way to know how each state plans to move forward. If Virginia's 13 percent is any indication, almost 1 million Americans will have their right to vote challenged. Our analysis suggests that winding up on the Crosscheck list is hardly proof that an individual is registered in more than one state. Based on the data, the program – whether by design or misapplication – could save the GOP from impending electoral annihilation. And not surprisingly, almost all Crosscheck states are Republican-controlled.

The man behind crosscheck is Kansas Secretary of State Kris Kobach, a Yale-educated former law professor. After 9/11, U.S. Attorney General John Ashcroft tasked Kobach with creating a system to track foreign travelers. (It was later shut down over concerns about racial profiling.) He is best known as the author of Arizona's "Driving While Brown Law," which allowed cops to pull over drivers and ask for proof of their legal status. He co-wrote the ultraconservative 2016 RNC party platform, working in a recommendation that Crosscheck be adopted by every state in the Union. He's also the Trump adviser who came up with a proposal to force Mexico into paying for Trump's wall.

In January 2013, Kobach addressed a gathering of the National Association of State Election Directors about combating an epidemic of ballot-stuffing across the country. He announced that Crosscheck had already uncovered 697,537 "potential duplicate voters" in 15 states, and that the state of Kansas was prepared to cover the cost of compiling a nationwide list. That was enough to persuade 13 more states to hand over their voter files to Kobach's office.

In battleground-state Ohio, Republican Secretary of State John Husted's Crosscheck has flagged close to half a million voters. In Dayton, we tracked down several of the suspects on our lists. Hot spots of "potential duplicate" voters, we couldn't help but notice, were in neighborhoods where the streets are pocked with rundown houses and boarded storefronts. On Otterbein Avenue, I met Donald Webster, who, like most in his neighborhood, is African-American.

Crosscheck lists him registered in Ohio as Donald Alexander Webster Jr., while registered a second time as Donald Eugene Webster (no "Jr.") in Charlottesville, Virginia. Webster says he's never been a "Eugene" and has never been to Charlottesville. I explained that both he and his Virginia doppelgänger were subject to losing their ability to vote.

"How low can they go?" he asked. "I mean, how can they do that?"

I put his question to Robert Fitrakis, a voting-rights attorney who examined our Crosscheck data. I showed him Donald Webster's listing – and page after page of Ohio voters. Fitrakis says that the Ohio secretary of state's enthusiasm for Crosscheck fits a pattern: "He doesn't want to match middle names, because he doesn't want real matches. They're targeting people with clearly defined ethnic names that typically vote for the Democratic Party. He wants to win Ohio the only way he knows how – by taking away the rights of citizens to vote."

Kobach refused to speak for this story. So I went to Newton, Kansas, where he was headlining an ice-cream-social fundraiser in a public park. I approached Kobach with the Crosscheck list he had refused me, and asked, "Why are these lists so secret?"

"It's just one of those things that white people are more likely to have. Like a sunburn. Or an Oscar nomination," host says of IDs

"They aren't," Kobach answered, contradicting what his attorney had told me.

I pointed to a random match on the Crosscheck list and asked him why it identified James Evans Johnson as the same voter as James P. Johnson.

Kobach denied the name could be on the list. "Our system would not yield this match," he said. (And according to the rules of his program, it shouldn't have.)

"This is the list you gave [Virginia], and they knocked off 41,000 voters," I said.

"That is false!" he said, as he hurried away. "You know why? Federal law prohibits that."

Kobach is correct that federal regulation typically would complicate such a sweeping purge, but somehow tens of thousands of voters in Virginia got knocked off the rolls anyway.

Kobach's Crosscheck purge machinery was in operation well before Trump arrived on the political scene – and will continue for elections to come. Low voter turnout of any kind traditionally favors the GOP, and this is the party's long game to keep the rolls free of young people, minorities and the poor. Santiago Juarez of New Mexico, an attorney who has done work for the League of United Latin American Citizens, has spent years signing up Hispanic voters in the face of systemic efforts to suppress their vote. He scoffed at the idea of a massive conspiracy among Latinos to vote in two states. "Hell," he said, "you can't get people to vote once, let alone twice."

2016-08-22 The Unleashing Humanity Dreams containing clues to coming prophecy.
Aluna Joy

After many months of unsettling dreams (I am sure that this had a lot to do with all those planets in retrograde), I feel something big has shifted.

Two nights ago, I had an ecstatic dream where I was crying so hard with joy. I couldn't contain the joy and the love, nor did I want to. Jeez, have I missed these types of dream.

The setting, of course, was in sacred sites, but it was a blend of Peru and England together. A couple of English sound healer pals were there playing music, and there were many others there also that I have known over the years. There was wonderful food and crystal clear water to swim in, and the sun never set. The blended local culture was just so full of love and joy!

Today, the energy is gentler than I have felt in months. But I can also feel the edge of a cocooning integration stage coming on. This will integrate all that we have gone through in the last few months. May the integration be gentle, full of peace, and love. I feel this could be a nice long plateau where our souls can reboot, recharge and thrive. ... as long as we don't get caught up in any of the world's drama :-)

Last night I had another dream with a prophetic message. I dreamed about my Peruvian ICA

STONE (If you don't know what this is, Google "stones of Ica"). I call him stony. He wanted to come to England with me to bath in the English sea on the east and west coast. This would be on both sides of the Michael and Mary Ley Lines that exist on the landmass of England, where they drop off into the ocean. I have not traveled with this stone since 911, mainly because of the heightened security, and also because the carrying of a baseball sized stone is considered a weapon. The dream showed me putting my Ica stone in my checked in bag. When I got to England, the bag was lost. There are not too many of my personal possessions that I am attached to but this is one of them. I feel that I am the caretaker of this stone.

The dream woke me up. So I got up and went to my office where my Ica stone is, to make sure it was still there. Once I saw that he was all safe, headed back to bed; but he called me back and asked me to bring him back with me. I put it at the head of my bed between two pillows. My little dog, Comet, begin to twitch wildly with a dream, and I got a very strong message about the coming times.

It was clear in his (Stone of Ica) sharing that we are to be very diligent at paying attention to each moment in our lives. Time and experience will begin to pass very quickly now. This will make the rocketship feeling of 2012 look like a paddleboat. I know that we are going to be really excited about the acceleration. The stone of Ica comes from a different type of technology. It is the technology of intuition and heart knowing, very much like a network of Crystal skulls. This stone also is aware of our current technology. He is painfully aware of how much of our lives we miss, because we have our faces in our iPhones, iPads, and computers, even though these devices and technologies have brought us together in a way that has never been experienced before in our lifetime. There are going to be a matrix of clues coming to us at a very accelerated rate. This Ica Stone, that is linked to a living library of stones in Peru, does not want us to miss out on all the amazing clues arising around us that will be available for us. These clues will help us make a series of very big choices in the coming months. If you have been feeling stuck this last year, hang on! We are coming unleashed.

After I thought about both of the dreams, I felt like the messages were conflicting. One being a retreat like cocoon state, and the other being a very active experience. So I asked about what I perceived as a conflict. And what I received was the messages have common ground. The cocoon-like integration space will help us be more aware of the new arising clues around us.

The one connection that I still don't understand is the connection between Peru and England. I have been working on the connections between Egypt and England for several years now. We have come to some pretty clear realizations. (I posted a lot of these realizations in prior posts and on our website). But the connection between England and Peru is a puzzle to me. We know the stones of Inca were brought here by beings from the stars. This is an ancient story that permeates most indigenous cultures of Earth. So maybe they also have a connection with England, the ancient pre-druid/celtic cultures there, and maybe even the Crop Circle phenomenal. In any case, we will be diligent on our journey to England to see what might arise for us to add to this new cycle of our lives.

The take away from all this is that humanity is being unleashed. Are you feeling it? Are you ready? Yes we are!
