HARD NEWS

- Rama found an interview between Bernie and Cenk of The Young Turks, 16 hours old

Ricahrd Wolffe was on the radio: an internet radio show called The Economist -

- Talked about history of Greece, WW 2 and Hitler: hundreds of trillions owed to Greece by Germany
- He said we are watching the EU go down – no way to save it.
  - The tsunami that is being talked about will affect the US, all of Great Britain: England is voting on leaving the EU – it's called BREXIT
- He also went into the 'back weeds' of the story and talked about why Hitler and his generals and the elite inner circle, the Thule Society, were so intent on getting the 9 Arcs of the Covenant, including the Arc of Gabriel, only recently found.
  - Has to do with cosmic frequencies pouring in right now
  - the issues at hand: the Word Magic being used: "refugees" or "migrants"
    - They play with words about how people are categorized, then exit those people stage left
    - This ties in with the what happened on the morning of 9/11
- John Kiriakou [former FBI agent] was interviewed by David Bar Simeon
  - he came forward and said George Bush ordered torture for those picked up after that event: he spent 2 years in jail for saying that!
  - said he was present, saw it happen and the lies about 9/11 are enormous – not one person has been arrested for what happened: had nothing to do with Iraq, or Pakistan or anywhere over there
  - there are over 2 million soldiers dead in Iraq, and 5 million Iraqis dead – never mind how many died in NYC
- This leads into the story of Joe Wilson and wife Valerie Plame [both FBI agents; she was outed by Bush Jr] who has written a book called Redacted.
  - Sheik Jalani [Islamic Sheik from either Iran or Pakistan] and Daniel Pearl – Dan Rather of 60 minutes was to interview the Sheik and Daniel – the interview was cancelled at the last minute, and Dan Rather was let go from that network!
  - Sheik Jalani is an intermediary between our world and the Jinn who are part of the 1/3 of the angels who opted to follow Lucifer. The Jinn are fire elemental beings connected with the Lords of Chaos/ the Adu Jihad; they were placed in crystal chambers by the Watchers after the fall of Lucifer and the 1/3 of the angels; the Adu Jihad/Lords of Chaos are contained in phantom-like containment fields which are in the etheric realms around our planet which is the lower Astral realm, 4th dimension, falling into the 3rd dimension right here on earth - which is why we see so many odd things going on

- The Sheik warned Daniel Pearl and Dan Rather that as the US entered Baghdad, and did not enter through the Gates of Ishtar, they would create chaos and anger: the Jinn were enraged because the Americans did not come through the Gates of Ishtar and honour the Jinn; nor did the Americans make reparations: to this day, Fallujah, sections of Baghdad, Aleppo, Beirut, parts of Yemen, Damascus – all look like Mordor; this is all tied in with the ancient war [the Middle East is where the Annunaki invaded from Maldek and nuked the civilization that was in that location] and the return of the Nibiru which is raising energies to 12th dimension and higher

June 6/2016: Nimrod & other locations were space cities, as the people were still in the 5th dimension; people & ships came and went. Yes, the Annunaki were there, and there was a bit of interplanetary war still going on at that same time: warring factions came and went from what we call The Middle East.

- The time lines in the bible are screwed up, and the accounts in the old and the new testaments of what happened are not the real stories.

- The piece that has not been shared to this day and why no one has gone to jail for this:
  - the death of Daniel Pearl was faked [he's in a witness protection program] – he blew the whistle on the fake CIA, now called ISIL and El Nosra, and on the goons of John McCain and Lindsay Graham who've been murdering innocent people in Syria and Iraq – why are John McCain and Lindsay Graham not hanging from a rope?
  - Also involved are Prince Bandar Bush [so-called because he is a member of the Saudi ruling family and a great friend of the Bush family, as he attended university in the US. He was adopted by the Bush family because they were making deals with each other] and Netanyahu: no one has gone to jail for 9/11, & microscopic bone fragments are still being found on the roof of towers in the area

June 6/16: Info added later, after conversation with Rama:

What is the connection between Pearl being off the scene and no one being sent to jail?

- Pearl was working with the CIA and was sent to Afghanistan to found out “the truth” about Osama and other groups that supposedly orchestrated 9/11 – this was to provide further justification for the war that led to the invasion of Iraq and the bombing of Afghanistan. It seems to be that the agencies sent him off on a wild goose chase: Pearl met Sheik Jelani who explained about the Jinn and the Adu Jihad, and R assumes Pearl learned a lot more about who and what the Jinn are and do. At some point, someone did not want the true nature of the situation to be revealed, so Pearl was removed from the scene. Both Pearl and the Sheik are alive, in spite of the reports of their death which were part of the lead up to the war in Iraq and the bombing of Afghanistans.
- In response to my question about why these 2 men were not just killed outright, R said when he asked about this, he was told it is still an open case, and you are not on our payroll. [An answer that essentially means mind your own business!]
- Two weeks after 9/11, an underground morgue was found not far from the towers, with 14,000 more bodies in it
  - John Kiriakou said Bush ordered torture, got almost 2 years in prison for saying
  - he called out Rachel Maddows for being a schill, yet she is of the Light and is doing what she has to do to stay alive.

Camp Lovewave:

- the word “freedom”; “love” “ law of vibrational energy” & how this ties in with what we are seeing now: a fight to the death; we have a female dragon running for president
- as Lee Camp said last night Bernie is trying to make sure there are no reptilians in the White House!

- Camp Lovewave played a clip of Russell Brand who said why do you think the queen does not come out of the palace: she is an undead person T: a cloned one, to boot!
  - they are about to nail her for war crimes, genocide, ecocide –
  - Tony Blair, Gordon Brown, Karl Rove are in bed with Bush Jr - Jeff Ganon was the sex slave with Bush, Cheney, Rove and the rest: he was 19 years; Alberto Gonzalez, the AG, was the one who brought him in to the game!
  - John Ashcroft and Bush Sr murdered the CIA agent in Peru about the Peruvian gold that was buried in the Phillipines: Because he – Mr Herman - knew the whole story, they chopped off his legs, arms, head and put the torso on a meat hook in the back of a pick-up truck in front of a butcher store in Orgeon
- this is the work of the 13 families: a message to everyone else regarding Faction 2 –
  - Herman vs Herman was the case: VK Durham was trying to get the gold for the people - talked about it, and she was in bed with Doris and EJ Ecker [Mr Bellringer is a Nazi who came over here; we send him love]
  - EJ Ecker and Doris got hoodwinked: they channeled a fake Hatonn, fake St Germain, fake Ashtar who were all downloaded clones through the Mt Shasta vortex, and the channeled material was programmed by the Black OPS – 52 books of it.
- About the Phillipine gold – the whole story is connected with Hillary who started the dinars and dongs who started this in 2004 to distract lightworkers from NESARA
  - Sheldon Nidle is equating NESARA with the dinars, dongs, The Event – ALL NOT TRUE!

Mr X, Kathryn and Kevin Costner [movie: Prince of Thieves, played Robin Hood] said

- Whitney Houston was murdered by the 13 families because she knew too much about what we are just talking about
  - So was Robin Williams: came out and challenged the 13 families and talked about weapons of mass deception
  - To be clear: when talking about “the 13 families” as a general term, actually referring to Hillary because:
    - since 1991, Hillary has formed a partnership with Bush Sr because he was no longer capable; had used heroin since 1980 & was a bumbling idiot
    - In 1991, KOS and a few good men killed Bush Sr and cloned him 34 times: they put all the clones on ice and use one at a time
      - the first one lasted from 1991-3; In 1993, he was killed by the Japanese who poisoned his food – didn't know he was cloned. It was televised!
  - so HILLARY HAS BEEN & IS RESPONSIBLE FOR ALL ACTIONS CARRIED OUT FOR 13 FAMILIES
- She Who was Here Before the Gods Were Here [Mother] comes now with her folks–
    - they bring the story back to Richard Wolffe and the other Arcs of the Covenant, the 9th being the Arc of Gabriel; the tomb; the sidereal weapons which are coming to the surface
    - The sidereal weapons are tools of love, yet can also be used for mal intent; when the dark ones get hold of these items, they misuse them
    - Richard said when you find something, you don't just start pushing buttons – this was in reference to CERN in Switzerland which has quit working for the 2nd time. Thanks goodness for the Ashtar Command or this planet would not be here!
  - the red star, blue star kachina, and 2 comets passing the earth: this is a sign that we are entering the Age of the 6th Sun, Sat Yuga is here NOW;
    - We have been lied to about the nature of time and about carbon dating [Many things which have been unearthed have been withheld from the general awareness and historical records, things which would provide more of the story about the civilizations that have been on the planet, for example
    - [June 8/16 - More info from T & R: about carbon dating: the earth is million times older than we have ever been told; calendars are wrong and how we judge time is screwed up. There will be a big wakeup call for humanity when how we see time, space, and how we measure minutes hours, years is revised. As the energy levels and dimensions raise in frequency, how we experience what we call "time" will be different

- things are moving faster than we are being told and that has always been so; as we lost our abilities (forgot them as a result of DNA manipulation), we were taken advantage of
- how they measure age with technology in terms of rocks: there are ways to do it with quantum energy technologies that are way more accurate]

- Leading the way is Bernie, Cornell West, the one representing Idle No More and the native Americans in North and South Amexum
  - Those in leadership positions in the DNC: Debbie Wasserman-Schultz, Barbara Lee, Gov Howard Dean [he's a pedophile too, part of a large trafficking ring] – T & R have found a 6 minute piece about the pedophile ring – including Hillary, Donald Trump, Bill Clinton, Jeffrey Epstein having girls; Tony Blair, Jimmy Saville [comedian on BBC tv, now dead];
  - David Bowie was killed because he tried to tell the truth: his song "The black star/sun" has to do with the return of Mother's people, as well as the ones who have come back to love
- the whistleblowers are bringing the story forward as we see the insanity of the election fueled by Koch Bros money and those who don't report their contributions, thanks to Citizens United.
  - Has to do with the unlawful Supreme Court, owned by Opus Dei and the Vatican.
  - All kinds of fake stories of how we have interacted throughout the timelines, and now this return of Nibiru bringing it all front and center –
  - what is going on now is NOT ABOUT EXTINCTION EVENTS!!! Alec Jones is predicting the end of the world: NOT SO! [The idea is to freak everyone out.]
- most important thing - which is hard to believe, almost impossible to understand unless we go deeper into the history - is that reptilians invaded and occupied the world against the Prime Directive: non-intervention in a civilization's development unless /in case of psychic or nuclear holocaust and we have had both for millions of years
  - It was 65 million years ago the Annunaki invaded & occupied the planet, and a huge asteroid hit the planet and created the Gulf of Mexico [this directive applies to all beings in any part of the universe because we were all created – and we co-created the only polar universe there is; the other universes are unity universes]
- We need to understand about the Annunaki - there are good ones, too , yet the ones who invaded did so with mal intent; they didn't just invade: they NUKED their way in here and occupied – and they knew better!
- what Zacharia Sitchen said: Anu [the leader of the Annunaki called himself Anu which] means the sun: claiming that name means that, as a reptilian, he was claiming – in reality - & playing a role as the sun
  - the reality check is that the original sun from which we get our energy is the Great Central Sun in the Pleiades, not Sirius as the Children of the Sun claim;
  - the Great Central Sun is Lord Alcyone who resides in the Pleiades, not in Sirius
  - Mother + Alcyone are consorts, Twin Flames, one single ball of plasma energy
  - the Universe of Nebadon – which was created as a polar universe to give us the experience of polarity, living in a human body, etc - has already graduated from being a polar universe; what we are seeing is what appears to be real /Maya.
  - the appearance is that we we are subject to gravity, that we die, that we are our physicality: we have "rental units" [Mother's term for Rama's body which She uses as a channel when She speaks on Friday nights]
  - Mother calls our bodies "rental units" because we volunteered as pure spiritual beings, pure essence of embodiment, called "ensoulment", to come into these bodies: the energy that animates the physicality is who and what we are: the energy came in and volunteered to play a role with everyone else

- and for the sake of understanding Oneness, we choose an agreement with Source, with Universal Oneness – the only possibility of Source is feminine, meaning non-linear. There is no possibility of god being male in that sense, because everything non-linear comes from another realm which some whose 3rd eyes are developed can see beyond the physical, the 3rd dimension, and see auras, experience clair audience, clair sentience, etc –

- the ability to see that other realities exist is a step in that direction [the non-linear direction of 5D and beyond] of developing [re-claiming] those abilities, like Eckanar taught people to time travel by exercising the ability to go into the 4th dimension where the ability to leave your body and not cut yourself off from the 3 main cords: the silver cord, the gold cord, the platinum cord

- Rama at the age of 13 was high on acid and almost cut all three when he forgot to breathe and didn't notice as he was travelling in other dimensions: Ashtar reeled him in and brought the body up to the ship, and merged the body with the cords into the body for him at the time, then told Rama his time was not up; go back and finish your mission.

- And Rama has done this trick a few times: yet it is not R's decision to say "enough is enough", though he thought he could get away with it & he could have killed himself in the process. In 1967, he went up to Ashtar's ship, as he wanted to see what Ashtar could do to end the Viet Nam war which he knew was unlawful and saw his brother come home, turned into a terminator!

- Really important – as R has to teach other people - that he does not decide to do away with his life force when he plays around with this: and lots of people feel that way ["enough is enough"] – there are more suicides now than ever before
  - the deal is when you feel enough is enough: let off steam. A sister last night did just that [reference to the conversation on Friday's conference call]; it is hard for people to understand how a bunch of reptilians could and did cut off their 12th strand of DNA which is the love strand; those of us who still have our love strand of DNA to comprehend or do! As Spock said: it's illogical to want to take your life force out – who would want to do that? And Rama asks himself that question, too.
  - T & R get calls all the time: enough is enough: where are the White Knights? We are waiting.
  - That is not the case: we are not "waiting". We volunteered to come into this particular live time when we knew that we were to stay in that body and finish; we said "I do not have the right to exterminate myself"; we said we would stay here and find where love is – which is always in the heart.

Big Will: HRC – she is going to be indicted next Wed, June 1st – seems like she is trapped and will not be President – will step down.

T: asks where he got the info

BW: from a reporter – has sent info to Rama: stated that the probe into her e-mails showed she had paid $5000 to fix her server so she could by-pass the State Dep't and understands that the e-mails have been read by the CIA??

T: Name of reporter? BW: Jeff Bigalow – stated he had inside sources in the FBI

R: yeah – this is a big deal: she's a lawyer – she knows both constitutional and statutory law – we are watching a dynasty and the pecking order of the 13 families: the Rockefellers and Duponts are below the Rothschilds and ?

- You cannot exist within a law of frequency that raises things up into the frequency of love; hate etc cannot exist within love; whether she is indicted or not, she cannot remain here – they have violated cosmic law
- Richard Wolffe on his "The Economist" program: we are watching the fall of the economies around the planet; nothing is going to save it except a little known Act called the Reformation Act – don't ask me about it

T: Was pleased that Wolffe said this on air, as millions of people listen to his program! This helps those who question whether N is real or not, and are not really supporting NESARA

- She brings up Sheldon Nidle – send him love – who is trying to equate dongs, dinars, zimbabwes and The Event with NESARA: these things and NESARA at opposite ends of the truth; Hillary and the 13 families created those things to keep people going in the wrong directions

R: all the stories that deal with Neil Keenan, Mr M1, the gold in the Phillipines – ALL OF THIS IS FAKE.

- the ascended masters: Neal Donald Walsh – Conversations with God - knows all about what is going on and he would not play St Germain in a movie called The Last Avatar if he did not know what was going on!!!

R: it is about vibrational energy called Love that is healing us and the planet.

T: WE HAVE TO FOCUS ON NESARA BIG TIME – PRINT FLYERS – go to the website, find the NESARA tab and then the flyer

R: why does Ray McGovern get thrown in the trash when he comes forward and talks about Hillary; what about Julian Assange, and Edward Snowden, and Chelsea Manning . . .

BW: Pres Obama in Japan: visited Hiroshima – is that the last trip that this president will make? Do you expect something to happen when he returns?

R: He will talk about full disclosure when Ashtar and the Commander whisper in his ears to do so

T: we are in the 5th dimension whether we are aware of it or embracing it or not –

NOBODY IS BLAMING ANYBODY FOR ANYTHING - THAT IS AN ILLUSION: blame does not exist!

- we decided to work together: 1/3 of the angels decided to do something horrible and destroy trillions of souls; that issue does not mean that we are not together – it means that in order to heal the rift, we must hold accountable together that which was caused and, at the causal level, we cannot receive money in this system and call it a solution –
- even though we want to build Cities of Light & help the young ones to not go to war: the young ones can comprehend understand what NESARA is because it is in alignment with the highest good for everyone.
- Saying that you cannot understand that is not true; it simply says you want money: “I want what I want when I want it” and this does not bring love.
- Focus on teaching the Law of One which is what NESARA is bringing us back to

Ross: Richard Wolffe on an internet radio show called The Economist [was the one who made the comment about the Reformation Act]

R: does not know the website – he is played every week in Santa Fe – should be an archive somewhere

- Ross will look it up and post it. Richard Wolffe said this TODAY.
- Ross is sure that the last time we heard about the reformation act was Bernie and Thom Hartmann

Cenk interviews Senator Bernie Sanders. They discuss superdelegates and how they are part of the anointment process. Sanders explains why his campaign isn't interested in using Hillary's email and FBI investigation issues against her. Discussion about whether or not Joe Biden will enter the race if/when Hillary gets indicted. Cenk wonders why Bernie isn't attacking Hillary Clinton even harder. Bernie shares how his parents would've felt about his run for President. Sanders outlines his approach in working with stonewalling Republicans as president. If Bernie could have only one policy position go through, it would be universal healthcare because it would free up other things like the economy. Discussion over whether or not Bernie thinks Hillary is sincere in her opposition to TPP. The possibility and optics of Hillary Clinton taking on a seriously progressive VP pick. Sanders talks about the 5 progressives he chose to be on the DNC committee. Now that he has energized this political revolution, Sanders discusses what he can do with the groundswell if he happens to fall short of the nomination.

On August 6, 1945, Thurlow was at school in Hiroshima when the U.S. dropped the first atomic bomb on a civilian population. She has been an anti-nuclear activist for decades.

What are the social, political, and economic ingredients for a revolution? Pulitzer Prize-winner Chris Hedges has a few ideas. He'll examine the looming collapse of our civil society, the frightening rise of demagogues, the transformation of political discourse into hate speech, and the political awakening of the Christian Right, the neo-Confederates, the Tea Party, right-to-life groups, nativists, and militias. According to Hedges, the inability of the liberal elite to respond to the growing disenfranchisement of the American working class is slowly leading to the final disintegration of what remains of this capitalist democracy. He'll explore this idea and its far-reaching negative effects: a rise in hate crimes against Muslims, African Americans, undocumented workers, homosexuals, feminists, artists, and intellectuals, and increased acts of domestic and state terrorism.

Guests Kai Bird

Pulitzer Prize-winning historian and journalist. He and co-author Martin Sherwin won the Pulitzer Prize for their book, American Prometheus: The Triumph and Tragedy of J. Robert Oppenheimer.

President Obama has become the first sitting U.S. president to visit the Japanese city of Hiroshima since U.S. warplanes dropped the first atomic bomb on August 6, 1945. The bombing killed 140,000 people and seriously injured another 100,000. Three days later, the U.S. dropped a second atomic bomb on Nagasaki, killing another 74,000 people. Speaking at the Hiroshima Peace Memorial Park, Obama offered no apology for the bombings but called for a world without nuclear weapons. "Among those nations like my own that own nuclear stockpiles, we must have the courage to escape the logic of fear and pursue a world without them," Obama said. Despite his call for an end to nuclear weapons, the United States has been quietly upgrading its nuclear arsenal to create smaller, more precise nuclear bombs as part of a massive effort that will cost up to $1 trillion over three decades. We speak to Pulitzer Prize-winning historian Kai Bird, co-author of "American Prometheus: The Triumph and Tragedy of J. Robert Oppenheimer."

AMY GOODMAN: This is Democracy Now!, democracynow.org, The War and Peace Report, as we turn to global news about Japan and the United States. Juan?

JUAN GONZÁLEZ: Well, President Obama has become the first sitting U.S. president to visit the Japanese city of Hiroshima since U.S. warplanes dropped the first atomic bomb on August 6, 1945. The bombing killed 140,000 people; another 100,000 were seriously injured. Three days later, the U.S. dropped a second atomic bomb on Nagasaki, killing another 74,000 people. Obama spoke today at the Hiroshima Peace Memorial Park, but offered no apology for the bombings.

PRESIDENT BARACK OBAMA: On a bright, cloudless morning, death fell from the sky, and the world was changed. A flash of light and a wall of fire destroyed a city and demonstrated that mankind possessed the means to destroy itself. Why do we come to this place, to Hiroshima? We come to ponder a terrible force unleashed in the not-so-distant past. We come to mourn the dead, including over 100,000 Japanese men, women and children, thousands of Koreans, a dozen Americans held prisoner. Their souls speak to us. They ask us to look inward, to take stock of who we are.

AMY GOODMAN: Speaking in Hiroshima, President Obama went on to call for a world without nuclear weapons.

PRESIDENT BARACK OBAMA: We may not be able to eliminate man's capacity to do evil. So nations and the alliances that we formed must possess the means to defend ourselves. But among those nations like my own that hold nuclear stockpiles, we must have the courage to escape the logic of fear and pursue a world without them. We may not realize this goal in my lifetime, but persistent effort can roll back the possibility of catastrophe. We can chart a course that leads to the destruction of these stockpiles. We can stop the spread to new nations and secure deadly materials from fanatics. And yet, that is not enough, for we see around the world today how even the crudest rifles and barrel bombs can serve up violence on a terrible scale. We must change our mindset about war itself.

AMY GOODMAN: Despite President Obama's call for an end to nuclear weapons, a new study by the Federation of American Scientists has determined the Obama administration has reduced the nuclear stockpile at a far slower rate than any of his three immediate predecessors, including George W. Bush and George H.W. Bush. In addition, the United States has been quietly upgrading its nuclear arsenal to create smaller, more precise nuclear bombs as part of a massive effort that will cost up to $1 trillion over three decades.

To talk more about President Obama's visit to Hiroshima, we're joined by Kai Bird, the Pulitzer Prize-winning historian and journalist, co-author of the book American Prometheus: The Triumph and Tragedy of J. Robert Oppenheimer.

Kai, thanks so much for being with us from Miami. Start off by responding to this historic trip, President Obama the first sitting U.S. president to go to Hiroshima. President Carter did, but that was after he was president.

KAI BIRD: Well, thank you, Amy. I'm very glad to be here on your show. And I'm actually quite excited that Obama made this decision to go to Hiroshima. It's really an extraordinary thing for an American president to go to this site. And while he offered no apology, his presence there, his mere presence in Hiroshima, is an implicit acknowledgment that something terrible happened. And, yes, he is a very complicated and contradictory president. And he's radical in some ways. He calls for a nuclear-free world. And on the other hand, as you just pointed out, he can—in his presidency of more than seven years now, he has reduced the number of U.S. nuclear warheads by about 13 percent. And many of us think, you know, we need far fewer than the 4,500 warheads we have today. And, yes, he's engaged in a modernization program that is going to be very expensive and dangerous. So, he's a very contradictory president. But going to Hiroshima and speaking the words that he spoke today is a real step forward to try to emphasize the danger of these weapons.

JUAN GONZÁLEZ: Well, I wanted to ask you about that speech, and I really encourage people to read the text of the speech, the full text, because it really seems to me one of the most eloquent speeches he's ever given. It's almost as if he's deciding, in his final months in office, he's got to have a Gettysburg-like speech to take down in history, because it really does talk about the dilemma of war throughout civilization, but at the same time, as we're saying, there's this enormous contradiction between the words and the actual actions.

KAI BIRD: Exactly. You know, he's a very cautious president in some ways, very pragmatic, and yet always eloquent in these situations. He understands the symbolism here. His instincts, I think, are correct. But he understands, as a pragmatic politician, that you waded into this issue with great caution as a U.S. president, because it's such a hot button. Even 71 years after we obliterated Hiroshima with one bomb, the notion that we should apologize, the notion that it was a bad decision, is still extremely controversial.

You know, more than 20 years ago, I was involved in this horrendous debate over the Enola Gay exhibit at the Smithsonian, which, you know, just harshly divided the country. And yet, that exhibit, I'm still wounded by what happened there. Four million Americans went and saw that exhibit, and it was filled with lies. It was censored. You know, real history—you know, they censored the words of, for instance, President Dwight Eisenhower, who was a critic himself of the decision to use the bomb on Hiroshima. And yet, at the time, the American Legion and the Air Force Association had such political power that they could force our National Museum to censor Eisenhower's own words in an exhibit.

So this is a very hot-button issue. And so, we—you know, for that reason, I'm encouraged that Obama went to Hiroshima and spoke eloquently about the nature of these weapons of mass destruction and what they can do.

JUAN GONZÁLEZ: Well, in terms of that, the whole issue of the lies, the main myth that you have tried to unmask or expose is that if not for the dropping of the bomb, the war would have continued, that the bombs ended World War II, at least in terms of the fight with the Japanese.

KAI BIRD: Right. And, you know, Obama, when he was about to go to Hiroshima, he said, "I'm not going to offer an apology." He was very explicit about that. He said, "That is—that historical incident, that—what happened in Hiroshima, the decision to use the bomb, I will leave that for the historians." Well, you know, 70 years later, the historical consensus, looking at the documents and all the evidence from both sides, has really shifted enormously. And we now understand that the decision to use the bomb on Hiroshima was a redundant thing. It was not necessary. What really persuaded the Japanese emperor and the military generals around him to surrender was the entry into the war of the Soviet Union. They feared the Bolsheviks invading the Japanese home islands. And that's really—that was the tipping point. So the bomb was redundant and, ultimately, unnecessary.

And by using it, though, we legitimized the use of nuclear weapons. And by legitimizing nuclear weapons, we made ourselves, for the last 50 years, 70 years, extremely vulnerable. And we are very lucky that these weapons have not been used on a third occasion in anger. And people forget that the father of the atomic bomb, J. Robert Oppenheimer, within three months of Hiroshima, was saying things like, "If we continue to go down this road and rely on nuclear weapons and they are used again someday in war, people will curse the names of Hiroshima and Nagasaki." And so we're still living with that threat.

AMY GOODMAN: And that issue of this dropping of the—a second atomic bomb three days later, after 140,000 people were killed in Hiroshima, 100,000 wounded, on August 6, August 9, 1945, dropping that second bomb, Kai Bird?

KAI BIRD: Well, yeah, there's enormous controversy over that, too. Why the second bomb, and so quickly after Hiroshima? Well, one of the answers is that Harry Truman, the president at the time, didn't even know that a second bomb was going to be used so quickly. He had given his acquiescence to the use of the bomb. It was General Groves, who was in charge of the Manhattan Project, who decided on the timetable. And Hiroshima happened on August 6, and they wanted—Groves wanted to use the second bomb, which was a different—a technically different bomb. So there were two different types of bombs, and he wanted to, in effect, test both. And, you know, three days was not enough for the Japanese emperor and the military establishment there to respond. They had no idea really what had happened in Hiroshima. It took them days to absorb the news and fathom what had happened. And, in fact, you know, their decision to surrender came when the Soviets entered the war just a few days later. That was the tipping point.

JUAN GONZÁLEZ: And briefly, if you could tell us the enormous regret that Oppenheimer, the father of the bomb, had about what his invention had led to?

KAI BIRD: Well, Oppenheimer was a very complicated man, and he himself never, quote, "apologized" for the bomb. He never apologized for quantum physics, for his role in inventing the bomb. He thought that this science was inevitable, the scientific journey of discovery to understand our world, our physical world, was inevitable, and that what he did was, you know, inevitable and a part of the human journey of self-knowledge. But he very quickly—you know, again, within months of Hiroshima, he was giving speeches, which shook the military establishment in Washington, saying things like, you know, this bomb was used on an essentially already defeated enemy. Now, you think about that. That's a very striking thing for the father of the atomic bomb to acknowledge, just within months of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, that the bomb was used on an essentially defeated enemy.

AMY GOODMAN: And—

KAI BIRD: So he was acknowledging there that it was not necessary.

AMY GOODMAN: And, Kai Bird, his famous quoting of the Bhagavad Gita, "I am become Death, the shatterer of worlds"?

KAI BIRD: Yes, well, Oppie—that was his nickname—you know, he was a polymath. He studied quantum physics, but he also loved French poetry, and he also loved the Hindu Gita. He learned Sanskrit so that he could learn it—read it in the original. And so, a few weeks after Hiroshima, when a New York Times reporter asked him what he had thought—and I think they caught this on camera, too—the words popped into his head from the Gita: "I am Death, destroyer of worlds." And so, he will be forever remembered with that phrase from the Gita.

AMY GOODMAN: I want to thank you very much, Kai Bird, for being with us, Pulitzer Prize-winning historian, journalist, co-author of the book American Prometheus: The Triumph and Tragedy of J. Robert Oppenheimer. Go to our website at democracynow.org, when we broadcast from Japan several years ago and went to Hiroshima, taken around by a Hiroshima survivor. When we come back from break, we'll be joined by yet another survivor, Setsuko Thurlow, a survivor of the Hiroshima bombing. Stay with us.

2016-05-27 Remarks by President Obama and Prime Minister Abe of Japan at Hiroshima Peace Memorial

The White House

Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release

May 27, 2016

Hiroshima Peace Memorial

Hiroshima, Japan

PRESIDENT OBAMA: Seventy-one years ago, on a bright, cloudless morning, death fell from the sky and the world was changed. A flash of light and a wall of fire destroyed a city and demonstrated that mankind possessed the means to destroy itself.

Why do we come to this place, to Hiroshima? We come to ponder a terrible force unleashed in a not so distant past. We come to mourn the dead, including over 100,000 in Japanese men, women and children; thousands of Koreans; a dozen Americans held prisoner. Their souls speak to us. They ask us to look inward, to take stock of who we are and what we might become.

It is not the fact of war that sets Hiroshima apart. Artifacts tell us that violent conflict appeared with the very first man. Our early ancestors, having learned to make blades from flint and spears from wood, used these tools not just for hunting, but against their own kind. On every continent, the history of civilization is filled with war, whether driven by scarcity of grain or hunger for gold; compelled by nationalist fervor or religious zeal. Empires have risen and fallen. Peoples have been subjugated and liberated. And at each juncture, innocents have suffered, a countless toll, their names forgotten by time.

The World War that reached its brutal end in Hiroshima and Nagasaki was fought among the wealthiest and most powerful of nations. Their civilizations had given the world great cities and magnificent art. Their thinkers had advanced ideas of justice and harmony and truth. And yet, the war grew out of the same base instinct for domination or conquest that had caused conflicts among the simplest tribes; an old pattern amplified by new capabilities and without new constraints. In the span of a few years, some 60 million people would die -- men, women, children no different than us, shot, beaten, marched, bombed, jailed, starved, gassed to death.

There are many sites around the world that chronicle this war -- memorials that tell stories of courage and heroism; graves and empty camps that echo of unspeakable depravity. Yet in the image of a mushroom cloud that rose into these skies, we are most starkly reminded of humanity's core contradiction; how the very spark that marks us as a species -- our thoughts, our imagination, our language, our tool-making, our ability to set ourselves apart from nature and bend it to our will -- those very things also give us the capacity for unmatched destruction.

How often does material advancement or social innovation blind us to this truth. How easily we learn to justify violence in the name of some higher cause. Every great religion promises a pathway to love and peace and righteousness, and yet no religion has been spared from believers who have claimed their faith as a license to kill. Nations arise, telling a story that binds people together in sacrifice and cooperation, allowing for remarkable feats, but those same stories have so often been used to oppress and dehumanize those who are different.

Science allows us to communicate across the seas and fly above the clouds; to cure disease and understand the cosmos. But those same discoveries can be turned into ever-more efficient killing machines.

The wars of the modern age teach this truth. Hiroshima teaches this truth. Technological progress without an equivalent progress in human institutions can doom us. The scientific revolution that led to the splitting of an atom requires a moral revolution, as well.

That is why we come to this place. We stand here, in the middle of this city, and force ourselves to imagine the moment the bomb fell. We force ourselves to feel the dread of children confused by what they see. We listen to a silent cry. We remember all the innocents killed across the arc of that terrible war, and the wars that came before, and the wars that would follow.

Mere words cannot give voice to such suffering, but we have a shared responsibility to look directly into the eye of history and ask what we must do differently to curb such suffering again. Someday the voices of the hibakusha will no longer be with us to bear witness. But the memory of the morning of August 6th, 1945 must never fade. That memory allows us to fight complacency. It fuels our moral imagination. It allows us to change.

And since that fateful day, we have made choices that give us hope. The United States and Japan forged not only an alliance, but a friendship that has won far more for our people than we could ever claim through war. The nations of Europe built a Union that replaced battlefields with bonds of commerce and democracy. Oppressed peoples and nations won liberation. An international community established institutions and treaties that worked to avoid war and aspire to restrict and roll back, and ultimately eliminate the existence of nuclear weapons.

Still, every act of aggression between nations; every act of terror and corruption and cruelty and oppression that we see around the world shows our work is never done. We may not be able to eliminate man's capacity to do evil, so nations -- and the alliances that we've formed -- must possess the means to defend ourselves. But among those nations like my own that hold nuclear stockpiles, we must have the courage to escape the logic of fear, and pursue a world without them.

We may not realize this goal in my lifetime. But persistent effort can roll back the possibility of catastrophe. We can chart a course that leads to the destruction of these stockpiles. We can stop the spread to new nations, and secure deadly materials from fanatics.

And yet that is not enough. For we see around the world today how even the crudest rifles and barrel bombs can serve up violence on a terrible scale. We must change our mindset about war itself -- to prevent conflict through diplomacy, and strive to end conflicts after they've begun; to see our growing interdependence as a cause for peaceful cooperation and not violent competition; to define our nations not by our capacity to destroy, but by what we build.

And perhaps above all, we must reimagine our connection to one another as members of one human race. For this, too, is what makes our species unique. We're not bound by genetic code to repeat the mistakes of the past. We can learn. We can choose. We can tell our children a different story -- one that describes a common humanity; one that makes war less likely and cruelty less easily accepted.

We see these stories in the hibakusha -- the woman who forgave a pilot who flew the plane that dropped the atomic bomb, because she recognized that what she really hated was war itself; the man who sought out families of Americans killed here, because he believed their loss was equal to his own.

My own nation's story began with simple words: All men are created equal, and endowed by our Creator with certain unalienable rights, including life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Realizing that ideal has never been easy, even within our own borders, even among our own citizens.

But staying true to that story is worth the effort. It is an ideal to be strived for; an ideal that extends across continents, and across oceans. The irreducible worth of every person, the insistence that every life is precious; the radical and necessary notion that we are part of a single human family -- that is the story that we all must tell.

That is why we come to Hiroshima. So that we might think of people we love -- the first smile from our children in the morning; the gentle touch from a spouse over the kitchen table; the comforting embrace of a parent -- we can think of those things and know that those same precious moments took place here seventy-one years ago. Those who died -- they are like us. Ordinary people understand this, I think. They do not want more war. They would rather that the wonders of science be focused on improving life, and not eliminating it.

When the choices made by nations, when the choices made by leaders reflect this simple wisdom, then the lesson of Hiroshima is done.

The world was forever changed here. But today, the children of this city will go through their day in peace. What a precious thing that is. It is worth protecting, and then extending to every child. That is the future we can choose -- a future in which Hiroshima and Nagasaki are known not as the dawn of atomic warfare, but as the start of our own moral awakening. (Applause.)

PRIME MINISTER ABE: (As translated.) Last year, at the 70th anniversary of the end of war, I visited the United States and made a speech as Prime Minister of Japan at a joint meeting of the U.S. Congress. That war deprived many American youngsters of their dreams and futures. Reflecting upon such harsh history, I offered my eternal condolences to all the American souls that were lost during World War II. I expressed gratitude and respect for all the people in both Japan and the United States who have been committed to reconciliation for the past 70 years.

Seventy years later, enemies who fought each other so fiercely have become friends, bonded in spirit, and have become allies, bound in trust and friendship, deep between us. The Japan-U.S. alliance, which came into the world this way, has to be an alliance of hope for the world.

So I appealed in the speech. One year has passed since then. This time, President Obama, for the first time as leader of the United States, paid a visit to Hiroshima, the city which suffered the atomic bombing. U.S. President witnessing the reality of atomic bombings and renewing his determination for a world free of nuclear weapons -- this gives great hope to people all around the world who have never given up their hope for a world without nuclear weapons.

I would like to give a whole-hearted welcome to this historic visit, which had been awaited not only by the people of Hiroshima, but also by all the Japanese people. I express my sincere respect to the decision and courage of President Obama. With his decision and courage, we are opening a new chapter to the reconciliation of Japan and the United States, and in our history of trust and friendship.

A few minutes ago, together, I and President Obama offered our deepest condolences for all those who lost their lives during World War II and also by the atomic bombings. Seventy-one years ago in Hiroshima and in Nagasaki, a great number of innocent citizens' lives were cost by a single atomic bomb without mercy. Many children and many citizens perished. Each one of them had his or her life dream and beloved family. When I reflect on this sheer fact, I cannot help but feel painful grief.

Even today, there are victims who are still suffering unbearably from the bombings. Feeling of those who went through unimaginable tragic experiences, indeed, in this city 71 years ago -- it is unspeakable. In their minds, various feelings must have come and gone -- that of those, this must be in common: That any place in the world this tragedy must not be repeated again.

It is the responsibility of us who live in the present to firmly inherit these deep feelings. We are determined to realize a world free of nuclear weapons. No matter how long and how difficult the road will be, it is the responsibility of us who live in the present to continue to make efforts.

Children who were born on that unforgettable day lit the light believing in permanent peace. To make every effort for the peace and prosperity in the world, vowing for this light -- this is the responsibility of us all who live in the present. We will definitely fulfill our responsibility. Together, Japan and the United States will become a light for hope, for the people in the world. Standing in this city, I am firmly determined, together with President Obama. This is the only way to respond to the feelings of the countless spirits -- victims of the atomic bombs in Hiroshima and Nagasaki. I am convinced of this. (Applause.)

2016-05-27 "I Want the World to Wake Up": Hiroshima Survivor Criticizes Obama for Pushing New Nuclear Weapons

http://www.democracynow.org/2016/5/27/atomic\_bomb\_survivor\_setsuko\_thurlow\_on

Extended interview with Setsuko Thurlow, who survived the Hiroshima atomic bombing, about the bombing of 1945 and her push to eliminate nuclear weapons. On August 6, 1945, Thurlow was at school in Hiroshima when the U.S. dropped the first atomic bomb on a civilian population. She has been an anti-nuclear activist for decades.

Watch Part 1

AMY GOODMAN: This is Democracy Now!, democracynow.org, The War and Peace Report. I'm Amy Goodman, with Juan González.

JUAN GONZÁLEZ: We continue our conversation with Hiroshima survivor Setsuko Thurlow. She was 13 years old when U.S. warplanes dropped the first atomic bomb on the city on August 6, 1945, killing 140,000 people and seriously injuring another 100,000. President Obama spoke today at the Hiroshima Peace Memorial Park, becoming the first sitting U.S. president to visit the city.

PRESIDENT BARACK OBAMA: The world was forever changed here. But today, the children of this city will go through their day in peace. What a precious thing that is. It is worth protecting, and then extending to every child. That is a future we can choose, a future in which Hiroshima and Nagasaki are known not as the dawn of atomic warfare, but as the start of our own moral awakening.

AMY GOODMAN: Those were the concluding words of President Obama's address today at the Hiroshima Peace Memorial Park. Hiroshima survivor Setsuko Thurlow is joining us for Part 2 of our conversation, joining us from the studios of the CBC in Toronto, the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

Setsuko, in Part 1, you gave one of the most graphic descriptions of a war survivor I have ever heard, surviving the atomic bombing on that day in Hiroshima, when you were 13. As you listen to President Obama, can you—did you expect an apology? And can you respond to what he said?

SETSUKO THURLLOW: Well, first of all, let me say, as I listened to his voice talking about the precious lives of the children who were lost, I was thinking of my four-year-old nephew, who was burned and blackened beyond recognition. I cared for them for several days. He died, together with his mother. He just happened to be walking over the bridge to the doctor's. That's why this was his fate. And whenever I remember their agony, I think of all the children. My four-year-old nephew came to represent all the children of the world. And that's a very important image I have, burned to my retina, as I keep speaking to the people of the world about the danger of nuclear war. So, anyway, I had tears when I listened to the president, as far as that is concerned.

Now, your question whether I want a apology, now, this has been talked about both here in the United States and Japan, too. If the president offered it, I think it's appropriate. If he chose not to offer it, I understand, given American political climate. Well, I hope I made my idea clear. Well, certainly, we deserved it. We could have received apology, although I don't—I didn't demand. I think apologies should be voluntary action. What meaning does it have if we force other party to say sorry?

But really, the killing of massive humanity, including my nephew and hundreds of thousands of innocent noncombatants indiscriminately—the killing noncombatants in war, that's a—it's immoral, and it's forbidden by the international law. But that was the pattern of mass killing, started in Tokyo, and about 70 percent of the urban centers of Japan had been destroyed. And Hiroshima was the 10th largest city. And we waited for it, and we kept wondering why Hiroshima was not attacked. Little did we know that the U.S. had a secret new bomb they wanted to experiment on a special city. So, Air Force was instructed not to attack Hiroshima, although all the other—most of the major cities had been attacked. Hiroshima was kept intact. And you can put two together, that, you know, the new bombs and keeping one city intact, and what's the connection? I think you can make the guess. Anyway, all this kind of things were happening. Very carefully calculated act.

JUAN GONZÁLEZ: Let me ask you, all these decades that you have now—since that terrible day, that you have been an anti-nuclear activist, what do you think the world has learned from the dropping of those two bombs on your country?

SETSUKO THURLOW: No, unfortunately, people are still denying, and they are living—sleepwalking, I would say. They know a little bit, but they don't want to face it. They push it in the corner of their brain and pretend as though nothing is going to happen to them. But we do have close to 16,000 nuclear weapons. Each one of it is much more destructive than the little one dropped over my head. Sixteen thousand of them, owned by nine—five nuclear weapon states recognized by the U.N., and four additional nations. And people just don't even know this kind of simple fact.

And Mr. Obama just recently declared that he was planning to spend $1 trillion to update a weapons system, I mean, to modernize nuclear weapons and delivery system, $1 trillion. What can we do with that money for schools, hospitals and community services and so on? We have been depriving people's daily lives in order to waste the money to make the armaments to kill masses of people, not just small troops and soldiers and so on. I mean, those strategies are planning to be effective in killing, by killing more in a more cruel way. And this time, I think Mr. Obama talked about—well, maybe strategists talked about making a more usable type of nuclear weapon. Well, to me, the whole thing and whole effort of having more and more, by more and more nations, for over 71 years, this is just simply insanity.

And it pains me, it pains many other survivors who survived, because we have been recording our painful story to tell the world as a warning about the danger of nuclear weapons. I want the world to wake up to the reality of this totally unacceptable reality. And I hope more people will stand up and say, "We are not going to take this nonsense anymore." As a matter of fact, 127 nations signed the humanitarian pledge, and they are saying we have waited for so long for the nuclear weapon states to fulfill their legal responsibility, obligation of the Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty, and to start working for the elimination, abolition of nuclear weapon. But they haven't done anything in 45 years. Therefore, we non-nuclear weapon states are going to stand up and take the initiative toward that goal—and civil society, like International Red Cross, and the NGOs, like ICAN. And so, the government and nongovernment people are standing up and now working.

As a matter of fact, this year, United Nations created a open-ended working group, and which met in February and this month and once again in August. And this group will be making their recommendation to the General Assembly in September about the way of achieving a prohibition and elimination of nuclear weapons. In other words, let's ban the nuclear weapon. It's not impossible. Mr. Obama talked about it might take a lifetime. It shouldn't. We have waited 71 years. We just cannot wait another 71 years. It has to happen tomorrow, really. That's how I feel. The sense of urgency is real. I wish Mr. Obama said something like that this morning in Hiroshima, with a stronger sense of commitment and urgency, and come up with concrete actions, not rhetoric.

AMY GOODMAN: Setsuko Thurlow, the meeting that's taking place this month in Geneva, nearly a hundred countries discussing the prospect of a nuclear ban treaty. Where was the United States in this?

SETSUKO THURLLOW: They weren't even there. None of the nuclear weapon states were there. You can understand why I am upset. Do they really seriously thinking of the day without nuclear weapon? He often talks about it. Does he really mean it? I have serious question. We have to start getting rid of them as quickly as possible, before the accident takes place, before terrorists take serious action. I have seen the massive death and suffering, and I don't want to see the similar situation multiplied by the hundreds and thousands. I just can't understand. I want the United States—as Mr. Obama said, United States has the moral responsibility to lead action toward abolition. Please back that statement with concrete action, soon.

AMY GOODMAN: Setsuko Thurlow, back in 1945, right at the time and afterwards of the bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, the discussion of radiation was raised by, among others, an independent journalist, Wilfred Burchett, who's made his way beyond the MacArthur ban on reporters going to Hiroshima. He made his way for 30 hours in a train and got out and saw this kind of moonscape that was once your city of Hiroshima. And he sat down with his Hermes typewriter, and he tapped out the words, "I write this as a warning to the world."

SETSUKO THURLLOW: Yes.

AMY GOODMAN: He didn't even know the word "radiation." He talked about some kind of A-bomb sickness, people with their hair falling out.

AMY GOODMAN: The United States government and Leslie Groves, head of the Manhattan Project with J. Robert Oppenheimer, would call this Japanese propaganda. The New York Times would write a series of articles countering this. Their reporter, William Laurence, was actually on the payroll of the Pentagon, as well. What about radiation and what you understood at the time? I mean, you were 13. You saw that—many bodies, but you also saw people surviving and then dying.

SETSUKO THURLLOW: That's right.

AMY GOODMAN: What did you understand was happening to them?

SETSUKO THURLLOW: Well, my school built a hut in the mountain, and the school invited us back. We were so happy to find who survived. Well, you know, many girls showed up wearing the bonnet or scarves, because they were bald, bald-headed. And I lost my hair, too, not completely like other girls. I was inside the building. Maybe that helped. But I, too, lost hair, bleeding from the gum, internal bleeding and diarrhea and all these kind of common symptom everybody shared in the city.

Let me talk about my favorite uncle and aunt. We heard that they were OK, they survived, they were alive, and they didn't have any external evidence of injury. But a week later, their bodies started showing purple spots all over the place. And there was a rumor: If you have that purple spot, that was a sure sign you're going to die. So, in those days, the first thing we did in the morning, before we got dressed, was to check every part of our body to make sure we didn't find. That was the kind of anxiety we lived with. Anyway, my parents looked after this sick uncle and aunt. And according to my mother, their bodies, my uncle's and aunt's bodies, seemed to be their internal—their internal—what is the word? The stuff inside the body.

JUAN GONZÁLEZ: The organs.

SETSUKO THURLLOW: Yeah, that seemed to be rotten and dissolving and coming out as thick black liquid. So, my mother had to use any old material or old newspaper to use as the diapers, well, until their deaths, that everything came out from their body just in a thick black fluid.

Radiation seemed to have affected people in many different ways and many different times. Somebody died immediately, and some a week later, month later, a year later. And, you know, that famous little girl who folded the paper cranes, I think she died 10 years later. The fact is, 71 years later, today, people are still dying as a result of the delayed effect of radiation. Atomic bomb hospitals are full of those people. So, the effect has been continuing on and on. And so, every time I go to Japan, I go to the atomic bomb hospital, I get a close checkup. I am grateful for that. And I am kept OK on a medication.

AMY GOODMAN: You are speaking to us from Canada right now, from Toronto.

SETSUKO THURLLOW: Yes.

AMY GOODMAN: You were a social worker in Canada, and you also have taken on anti-nuclear activities your whole life.

SETSUKO THURLLOW: Yes.

AMY GOODMAN: What is the message you want to leave people in Canada with, in the United States with, and people all over the world today?

SETSUKO THURLLOW: Stop pretending. Face squarely the reality. Find out unacceptable reality of nuclear weapons. We can't just leave it to the politician, military experts. They believe—the nations which still have those nuclear weapons, they believe in military doctrine of deterrence. They think by having more wicked stuff and by threatening the people, they can maintain security. But, to me, it's just sheer illusion and delusion. I want the people to come out of that mentality.

Life is worth living, and we have to, together, explore how we can have that kind of life. Well, one practical thing we can do is, first, let's get rid of nuclear weapons. They are not going into provide—giving us the security. It gives us more insecurity. I think we just have to study the issue, and this is what I often say to high school students, college students. Let's learn about the issue and form some kind of opinion, and once you have opinion, communicate your opinion with your members of Parliament and pressure the government to take action. I'd like to say it, both United States and Canada. Well, Canada has a new government, but Canada's nuclear policy hasn't changed. I was hoping it would have more fresh, creative approach. But right now, I understand, Mr. Dion's ideas seem to be the same old idea from the other regime. I think—

AMY GOODMAN: Justin Trudeau's.

SETSUKO THURLLOW: Justin Trudeau? I don't know if he has had a chance to inform himself about this. He seems to be busy with other issues. But really, it's about time he should put himself to learn the issue. And together with the foreign minister, I'd like to see the change, and just don't hide behind U.S. military doctrine. Just because Canada is a member of NATO, I guess it has the military moral responsibility. But it can choose to be more independent, more free and democratic. Democracy is really the key. In this nuclear age, democracy doesn't seem to be valued. You know? In secrecy, things are decided and implemented. And I don't feel my views are listened to appropriately. Millions of people working around the world are feeling the same. And we are not going to take it.

AMY GOODMAN: Setsuko Thurlow, I want to thank you for being with us, a survivor of the U.S. bombing of Hiroshima in 1945, the first U.S. atomic bomb to be dropped in the world, followed by the second. Three days later, the U.S. dropped an atomic bomb on Nagasaki. Overall, well over 200,000 people killed, well over 100,000 people wounded. It sounds like your voice will be heard in Washington, D.C. On June 6, you'll be addressing the Arms Control Association annual meeting. Also on the bill, President Obama's deputy national security adviser, Ben Rhodes. It'll be interesting to hear if you have a conversation. Thanks so much for being with us, joining us from the studios of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation in Toronto, Canada. Thank you so much.

SETSUKO THURLLOW: Thank you so much.

AMY GOODMAN: I'm Amy Goodman, with Juan González. Thank you for joining us.

SETSUKO THURLLOW: Thank you.

This week, the Collective answer a question from a Lightworker who wrote in to say:

I think it's important for Light warriors to realize that their Spirit team has everything under control, and that they are bringing each one of us along at the perfect pace. That we need not be worried, and that all is under control at all times.

We are the trailblazers laying the ground work for the next wave of Lightworkers. We need to start having direct communication with our Spirit team. We need to let them do their job!

How can we help our Spirit teams bring us through the Ascension process—how do we make their jobs easier?

The Collective: Greetings, powerful ones!

This is an excellent question, and we are grateful to you for having raised it.

For you are not here to rely merely on your own wisdom.

That would be equal to deciding to build a house, and then saying to the builders, electricians, and plumbers who have volunteered to help you build your house for free, "I don't need your input! I'll work this one out on my own, thanks."

And certainly, you could build that house on your own.

But it would be a shoddy one, with much needless effort taken to learn a great deal of knowledge that is freely open to you from others.

It would be a problem-prone house that did not suit your needs and preferences, anywhere near so well as a home made by those fully trained with exactly the right experience and skills—the insider information—you need.

And we use the term "insider information," because that is a sort of buzzword in many cultures.

It implies, Here is a shortcut to the very information you have been seeking—you don't have to guess, or spend months researching the issue while standing on the periphery! Here is the guidance and insight you seek, right from the source.

And we would say, that that would be the very first and most important thing that you could do, to help your team support you better—to say to them about any issue, "What is the higher perspective on this? What am I missing? What do I need to know about this?"

If there is no pressing issue at hand, and you want to know what it is that you don't know, but need to know, then simply ask: "What do I need to know?"

For this is one of the more difficult parts of their job—the fact that you are usually unaware of what kind of information or guidance to ask for, on what issue.

The "invisibility" factor is not the hardest part for them, for most of you are able to see your Divine helpers in your mind's eye, or to feel their presence with you in some way. You also speak directly with them in your sleep state.

And increasingly, as you continue to Ascend, you will be able to see them as clearly as you see loved ones now when they walk into the room.

The hardest part for them, is having information that would make your life so much simpler, so much more joyful and fulfilling, and so much more on track with your higher purpose—but no open channel, no listening ear open to receive it.

And of course, they do send you information without your asking. They do this all the time. But you must be open to noticing it, then willing to trust what you receive.

You might see a headline jump out at you with some phrase that answers something you've been quietly wondering about—perhaps a metaphor that simplifies or explains something you're grappling with.

Or you might overhear a conversation between strangers, or run across an article online that begins to open the door to a whole new area of interest that you have been unconsciously moving toward.

You might feel a gentle or insistent inner nudge to visit a friend you haven't seen in a while, or to see a particular sort of film you wouldn't normally go to, or to visit a particular shop you hadn't been planning on going to, only to find there some comfort, encouragement, object, or message from your team, soul family, or twin flame that they had been trying to get to you.

There are innumerable ways that your team delivers these messages.

But by far, the fastest and most reliable way for them to speak to you is to have a conversation with you, led by you, in which you sit down with them each morning and ask what you need to know, either on a particular subject or in general.

Imagine yourself sitting with them in the higher realms, perhaps by a beautiful stream or waterfall. Or imagine them there in the room with you. Either way is fine.

For there is much that is vital for you to know, particularly in these Ascension times, that you do not even know is important, or why.

There is much that is vital to your life path or your soul mission that you are not open to inquiring about, because this is a new area, or one that has not yet struck you on a conscious level as being urgent enough to seek higher insight on.

And so they wait, slipping in reminders and nudges, messages small and large, conscious and unconscious, powerfully want to draw your attention to that which you decided to learn, investigate, accomplish, or experience before you even incarnated.

You may have even assured them, before incarnating, that you would be waiting and listening for their invaluable, loving, supportive higher guidance each day, and that they'd better be fully ready to offer it!

Then you arrived here on Earth, and as a small child, still delighted in speaking with these loved ones, who watch over you, and send you Love at every moment, whatever your circumstances.

Then you grew a bit older, and began to lose touch by the age of seven or so (a time when most children stop seeing Angels and faeries), falling prey to socialization methods specifically designed to program you away from your higher self, your support team, and your life mission, on every level.

Yet, nothing is lost. For you are here in this remarkable era to do the very thing that in other centuries, only poets, sages, and visionaries could manage, and that is to remember *Who you are, and why you are here.

Part of that remembering is the realization that you have a higher self, who with those Angelic guardians and spirit guides who volunteered to come forward with you, desires at every moment to speak with you, to engage you in ways that not only lift your vibration to fifth dimensional levels, but remind you of how completely loved and guided you are, at all times.

As ever, dear ones, there is only the amount of Light in your life that you allow in.

And so we will not list ten or twelve things one could do to make one's support team a bit more at ease, and to make their job easier.

They are well used to being quietly in the background, stepping in and only making a very noticeable commotion when an emergency—something that might take you off your path—suddenly appears.

We will only say, Speak to them! As you drive down the road, as you walk on the street or the hiking path, as you lie in the bath, as you awaken or before you fall asleep.

As you sit under a tree and contemplate your Mother planet's beauty and constant flow of color and life.

As you meditate, or visualize with joy a life of independent wealth, perfect health, fulfilling relationships, joyful work (that is really play), and yes, full disclosure of the Galactic presence, and full enactment of NESARA law.

Ask them, "Tell me what I'm missing! What should I pay attention to now? If I don't hear your words clearly, then send me the energy of your wisdom, so that I naturally live it out! Speak, friends! I am listening."

"Let your wisdom be my wisdom. Let your Divine Love be my own," in other words.

Do not even consider stepping out the front door in the morning, or taking on the chores of the day in any way, without first taking at least five minutes with your team, to find out what perspective is important now.

Which matter needs attention. What joy you have been missing, that you are meant to dive into now, headfirst.

Ask, and command forth their reply, in whatever way you will receive it best.

Then dance to that beautiful inner music! Let it lead you with comfort and joy throughout the day.

For your own voice, your own higher wisdom—your own fifth dimensional intuitive ability—are being born, and growing stronger by the minute, with all the energies of the heavenly realm behind you.

It is always your Loving, miraculous presence that makes our job easy, dear ones! You are all that matters, and the Love within you, all there is.

Namaste! We are with you, always.

2016-05-18 June 2016 - Mutable Transformation of the Collective Consciousness Continues

Mutable Transformation of the Personal and Interpersonal Realms

Recap

Mutable energy has dominated the Zodiac in the form of a mutable T-Square since last fall. This heavily mutable phase marks a decisive threshold in our transition out of a 30 to 40 year astrological cycle.

Under the influences prevalent during that long cycle, the human race co-created a top/down global political and economic system. It did so largely by revisiting and building upon ancient patterns already deeply ingrained in collective consciousness. This system favored the 1% at the expense of the 99%.

This unbalanced system so created showed the first real signs of coming apart when Pluto entered Capricorn in 2008-9. Its undoing speeded up when Uranus moved into Aries in 2010-11. Under the influence of the mutable T-Square, it is being transformed into a more equitable system. Relatively speaking, this transformation is moving quickly. But its outcome is still far from certain.

Mutability is driving us toward more nuanced, holistic, equitable and compassionate ideas. It is steering us away from the toxic, rigid, grossly simplistic ideologies and harsh dichotomies, or polarities, that made extreme global inequality possible and continue to sustain and promote it. Mutable energies are just not conducive to the simplistic, harsh dichotomies and toxic partisanship that make gross inequity possible.

The Mutable T-Square as Rudder

Peak mutable energy has so far expressed primarily through a potent and enduring mutable T-Square. It is acting like an astrological rudder, turning us relentlessly toward the archetypal values expressing through it.

At one level, the T-Square is pushing us toward a selfless concern for the needs, preferences and rights of others. On another level, it is urging on us a respect for truth, attention to facts and details and a commitment to providing equal benefits for all.

On a practical down-to-earth level, the mutable T-Square is vitalizing an interest in co-creating an equitable global society that benefits the 100%, the whole.

The Interactive Mutable T-Square

This T-square bends all the transits in which it is involved to its own purposes, broadly reshaping collective consciousness. I summarized some of the T-Square's interactions in May and discussed them more fully in other recent posts.

The mutable T-Square has combined its energies with eclipses, Kites and retrogrades to infuse collective consciousness with the mutable archetypes it represents. With the passage of the summer months, the combinations it makes with transits are becoming more forceful.

June 2016 - Mutable Transformation of the Personal and Interpersonal Sphere

On May 9th, mutable Mercury, the ruler of Gemini and Virgo, two mutable signs, transited, or eclipsed, the Sun in Taurus. (Mercury only transits the Sun 13 times in a century.)

The Mercury transit will augment the influence of mutable energies and archetypes generally and help them permeate consciousness. Eventually, the power of the Mercury transit will blend the mutable archetypal principles more fully with the contents of mass consciousness.

Our thoughts, feelings and communications will become more subtle. We will become more concerned with fine distinctions and factual detail. This shift will work forcefully against the polarizing oversimplifications that have plagued public discussion for so many years.

A Deep Mutable Dive

June's aspects will blend mutable values more thoroughly and more specifically into individual consciousness. Toward that end, this month's dominant aspects will interact directly, forcefully and at length with the mutable T-Square.

In June, the three planets of the mutable T-Square, Jupiter, Saturn and Neptune, will make up three angles out of four in a series of Grand Squares. Sun, Venus, and the Moon will take turns completing this series of Grand Mutable Squares.

From June 2nd thru June 5th, each body will not only complete a Grand square, it will make an exact hard aspect to each of the three planets in the T-Square in quick succession. Mercury will repeat this feat later in June.

Each body will complete a Grand Square in mutable signs several times over. Each successive Grand Square will remain within orb while the other planets form their Grand Mutable Square and their series of hard aspects with the T-Square. They will blend into an energetically varied blur. So June will bring us a rolling, overlapping series of Grand Squares that blend the energies of Sun, Venus, Moon and Mercury into an unusually complex, intensive and kaleidoscopically varied energetic flow. Perhaps needless to say, the effects will be disorienting and potentially very stressful. Clarity and certainty will elude us.

As noted, Sun, Venus and the Moon will do their work during the first week or so of June. Mercury will follow suit around the 20th. Plan accordingly.

Mutable Transformation of the Interpersonal Realm

May's Mercury transit of the Sun nurtured mutable archetypal patterns in collective consciousness. Increasingly, as a result, mutable archetypal solutions will start being applied to shared, societal challenges. But June's aspects will be more specifically personal and interpersonal in their effects.

Together, Sun, Moon, Mercury and Venus govern our personalities, our public identities and our relationships: who we are in and for ourselves and who we are for and with others. They govern our innermost psychological and spiritual patterns as well as the patterns of our closest, most intimate relationships. They are about our personal and public identities on the most fundamental levels.

These innermost bodies rule the deepest personal and interpersonal realms of our shared lives. June's Grand Mutable Squares will drive archetypal mutable values deep into our personal consciousness. The mutable archetypes will begin to express fully and powerfully from the most intimate levels of our consciousness and the most intimate areas of our personal and interpersonal lives.

Gem Cutting

In brief, then, the Grand Squares of June will make the patterns that shape our personal and interpersonal awareness more consistent with the values of the mutable T-Square. Essentially, that will involve a commitment to truth and selfless service. These values will rapidly disperse until they permeate our individual and collective lives.

The Grand Mutable Squares will block and deconstruct patterns inconsistent with the principles of truth, service and fairness expressed in the mutable T-square. They will work powerfully against the degradation and abuse of mutable principles even as they sharpen and refine the mutable facets of awareness.

Some Cautionary Notes

We should be aware that Chiron and Nessus are both known for utilizing illness, injury and discomfort to bring about needed transformations. Nessus will remain a palpable background influence in June. However, Sun, Moon, Mercury and Venus will all be squaring Chiron in the course of June. That raises warning flags.

Finally, June ends on a constructive but very complex mix of aspects that strongly support manifestation. If you combine the Grand Squares with the end of month aspects supporting manifestation, you come up with a bewildering, conflicting mix of challenging and supportive aspects - one of those situations whose outcome rests precariously, uncertainly in the lap of the gods. I think the best advice would be to proceed slowly, thoughtfully and with caution.

The aspects will only become more confusing and, in their way, chaotic, as the summer progresses. The fog will grow denser, our path less certain.

Decision Points Ahead

Most astrological aspects are best understood in probabilistic terms - of having a higher or lower probability of producing a certain effect. Eclipses are, however, properly thought of as decisive. Technically, eclipses are probabilistic. However the degree of probability in their working is relatively so low that, for all practical purposes, their effects are decisive. When considered closely, they have a seeming inevitability and finality inconsistent with the notion of probability. They are fateful and mark points of no return.

Three eclipses spread through late August and September will bring matters to a head. They will judge the choices we have made during this often baffling summer.

Eclipses act on the basis of how well a given phenomenon - a choice, an initiative, a project - conforms to the goal defined by the Moon's North Node. That will be the standard by which we are all measured during the three eclipses of August and September.

With such a confusing array of aspects during the summer, including June's, it will be impossible to load the dice or stack the deck in our own favor. Nor will it allow us to mask the decision of the eclipses. So we should work our way through June with that in mind.

We seem to have been wavering between two courses of action recently. The upcoming eclipses will remove the uncertainty about our long term path.

Under the influence of these eclipses, our plans will stand or fall based exactly on how well they conform to the mandate embodied in the mutable T-Square.
